Steady Improvement in the Condition of the Prince of Wales—Parliament.

LONDON, Dec. 17—P. M.—An official bulletin, issued from Sandringham at 9 o'clock this morning, announced that the Prince of Wales passed a quiet night, and was satisfactorily progressing toward recovery. Another bulletin, issued late this afternoon, reports that the Prince has had a tranquil day.

The Observer today says Parliament will meet at the second week in February.

FRANCE.

Commemorating English Relief in the War—The Assembly Opposed to Going to Paris—Exemptions from Military Service.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—A French committee proposes to present to the Government of England an oil painting commemorative of the great efforts made by the people and authorities of that country to supply the French people with food when they were sorely pressed by famine and distress at the close of the war. A majority of the National Assembly is still averse to a return to Paris. It is reported today that an arrangement is likely to be effected under which the Executive Departments will take up quarters in Paris while the Assembly remains at Versailles. Eighty of the extreme Legitimists in the Assembly will, it is said, secede from the majority of the monarchical party in case the Duke D'AUMALE is chosen its leader. The Committee upon the Reorganization of the Army has agreed to exempt from compulsory military service all ecclesiastics and heads of commercial establishments.

EXTRAORDINARY STORY.

A Japanese Junk Drifts 2,500 Miles in Nine Months—Three of the Crew Rescued.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—The schooner Hutchinson, from Alaska, has arrived here, and brings from Adaho Island three shipwrecked Japanese seamen, whose junk drifted ashore there, having been disabled off the coast of Japan, and drifted by the Japanese Gulf Stream 2,500 miles in nine months, finally beaching there. Twenty-three others of the crew had starved to death on board. The three rescued men will be sent back to Japan by Consul BROOKS.

JAPAN AND CHINA.

Unrestricted Foreign Intercourse Peaceable—Destructive Fire at Hakodadi—The Japanese Adopting Foreign Customs.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17—The Steamer Great Republic, from Hongkong and Yokohama, arrived here today. She brings the following passengers for New-York: Capt. William Whitlaw Phillippens, T. G. Lesoe, C. McKean, G. D. Hammill and child, E. F. Young, H. G. Hipoke, Dr. J. P. Patterson, and three Japanese students; for Europe: G. Axby and T. A. Cape. She also brings on freight, to go overland, 13,705 packages of tea, and 261 packages of silk for New-York, 1,811 packages of tea for Boston, 45 packages of silk for Hartford, 1,071 packages of tea for Chicago, and 26 packages of tea for St. Louis. WILLIAM H. SIDDONS, Third Officer, died on this trip. On Nov. 16 the steamer passed thirty miles from Surya Island, and saw a new volcano in a violent state of eruption.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 29.—Mr. DE LONG, the American Minister, has returned overland from Hakodadi. An embassy leaves here by next steamer to confer with foreign Governments relative to the revision of treaties, to be made in July next, by the united demand of foreign Cabinets. The Mikado is willing to open up the entire country to foreign intercourse, but the request must be a united one to have any effect. A fire at Hakodadi destroyed nearly the whole town, and property valued at over $500,000. Several officers of the frigate Colorado were presented to the Mikado. Orders have been issued by the War Department to the former Daimios to transfer all arms and munitions of war to the Government. United States Minister DE LONG returns home by the next steamer, to confer about the revision of the treaties. MOTENA, the Mikado's Envoy to Hawaii, has, on his return, received an appointment of Collector of the port. The exports of tea are 1,000,000 pounds in excess of last season, with a brisk demand. Silk is firm. Another embassy has been sent to Ceres by the Mikado. The Japanese are discarding their dress for foreign styles.

The Flood at Tien-tsin Unabated—Heavy Robbery.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 13, via SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—The floods near Tien-tsin continue. The residents of that city represent the need of protection during the ensuing Winter. The bar at Shanghai is to be dredged. A robbery of bullion to the amount of $20,000 has taken place on board the steam-ship Shanel. The Juan Buttroy has been wrecked near Swatow. The collision case between the Kiil Sin and Shanghai Dredger Companies has been decided against the latter. The United States ships Benecia, Monocacy, and Palos are at Shanghai. The tea-ships Hostiah and Midnight sailed for New-York.

THE NEW JAPANESE EMBASSY.

Probable Departure of the Party Yesterday for San Francisco—The Aims and Purposes of the Officers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—Authentic advices from Yeddo, received just as the steamer Great Republic sailed, say the Embassy which sails from Yokohama today, and is due here Jan. 10, will be the most important that has ever left an Oriental nation for America or Europe. It is sent out by order of the Japanese Parliament and the Mikado, that the ruling classes may study for themselves Western civilization, and not depend upon the reports of inferiors, as hitherto.

Its head will be JAWKURA, late Minister of Foreign Affairs, the new Prime Minister of Japan, assisted by KIDO, Chief of the Emperor's Privy Council, who, with the Chief Minister of Public Works, Chief Minister of Finance, and Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, compose the Embassy proper. They will be accompanied by eight secretaries, twenty-one officers of the rank, and twenty-one young noblemen, traveling for information.

They will proceed to Washington overland, visit the principal cities of America, thence to Europe and around the world. United States Minister DE LONG accompanies them to Washington. CHARLES WALCOTT BROOKS, Japanese Consul at San Francisco, has been directed to accompany them around the world. All the officers will retain their positions while absent from the Empire.

MEXICO.

Progress of the Revolution—Opening of Congress—President JUAREZ and his Cabinet—Miscellaneous News.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 9, via HAVANA, Dec. 17.—The revolution continues to spread. The States of Oaxaca, Nueva Leon, Sonora, Durango and Zacatecas are in the power of the revolutionists, and the pronunciamientos prevail in San Luis, Vera Cruz and Puebla. President JUAREZ opened the session of Congress on the 1st inst., with a remarkable speech on the situation. He said the country appears to be consuming itself in untruthful struggles, and that militarism arain opposes the standard of legality, bringing back the time when a revolution signified the change of individuals in power. He counts upon the aid of Congress to suppress the seditious movement. The Speaker of Congress replied that Congress trusts that peace will soon be re-established, and that the Republic is satisfied with the re-election of JUAREZ, excepting the States of Nueva Leon and Oaxaca, and the bandits who are robbing the conductas.

JUAREZ has closed the ports of San Angel and Solina Cruz. He maintains a fearless attitude and speaks confidently of crushing the rebellion. Government troops to the number of 14,000 are pressing PORFIRIO DIAZ, who has 8,000 or 9,000 men. It is supposed, however, that Gen. ROCHA's retreat from Tehuacan is the beginning of the Government reverses, as DIAZ is the best General. The Cabinet remains unchanged. The people complain that the opposition is directed more against the Cabinet clique than against JUAREZ.

DAUPHIN SANCHEZ, the President's son-in-law, has been sentenced to pay a fine of $2,000 or to be imprisoned one year, for contempt of the Judiciary. The operations of the revolutionists under DOBLES and GUERRA are becoming extensive in the Western States. ESCOBEDO has resigned his Governorship and taken the field.

Ample faculties, equivalent to dictatorships, have been granted the Juarez Governors of States. The Governors commit acts of despotism, but the Dictatorship of JUAREZ is of the mildest character. The journals of the capital are discussing the probabilities of an American Protectorate.

Except among officials, foreign Ministers and Consuls, the belief in an early American intervention is credited, and is considered the only salvation for the country.

The Two Republics (newspaper) boldly announces today that the present events are driving to a Protectorate or annexation to the United States. Business is prostrated, and all industries are paralyzed. Levies continue, and the streets in all the towns are becoming thinned of able-bodied men. It is reported that Gen. ROCHA continues his retreat, and that several States have been declared in a state of siege.

Severe attacks are made in Congress on the Vera Cruz Railroad. The first contracts for the construction of the road are being ventilated. The revolutionary chiefs have repudiated DIAZ's proclamation. GARCIA CADENA, a member of Congress and a revolutionary General, has been arrested in San Luis, and is to be brought to the capital for trial.

Pronunciamientos has been declared in the States of Guanajuato and Mexico. It is rumored that ESCOBEDO and CANALES intend to pronounce in favor of LERDO D'TEJADA. The Government is receiving large supplies of arms. JESUS GARCIA has been elected Governor of the State of Mexico. It is rumored that JUAREZ will resign after suppressing the revolution. DIAZ occupies Tehuacan, and the Federals are retiring. It is stated that an attempt was made to poison DIAZ by placing a glass of lemonade at his bedside containing a large quantity of morphine. The Federals discredit the story. LOGARDA, a noted Indian chief, previous to his death, appointed a Regency to govern his people. The Mexican and American authorities are closely investigating the bark Brothers affair. A party of armed men assaulted Chapultepec Castle on Sunday, but were repulsed by the guard. No engagement of importance has occurred in the Central or Western States.

Gems and Gold Quartz Under the Bed of the Missouri River.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 17.—Workmen on the cesson of Pier No. 6 of the bridge across the Missouri River at this point, on Saturday found magnificent specimens of amethyst, garnet and gold-bearing quartz in the gravel overlying the rock bottom at a depth of forty-three feet below low water. This gravel bed is evidently the old bottom of the sea. Work on the bridge is progressing rapidly. The sinking of the second pier commences next week.

Boiler Explosion in Chicago—Two Men Killed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—About 8 o'clock this afternoon the boiler in the glue factory of WALL BROS., on the south branch of the river, near Archer-avenue, exploded. JOHN RICH, a carpenter, and CHARLES BECKER, fireman, who were passing through the engine-room at the time, were instantly killed. Both leave families. The boiler was almost new, being used only about ten days. It is supposed that an insufficient quantity of water in the boiler was the cause of the explosion.

Suicide of a Man Ruined by the Chicago Fire—His Wife a Maniac.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—C. MACNANT, who lost his all by the fire, committed suicide by shooting this afternoon. Just before committing the deed he wrote a note filled with tender references to his mother, wife and children, saying that he could get nothing to do, and was tired of life. His wife, who has been an invalid since the fire, went raving mad at the sight of her dead husband.

Ninth Massachusetts Congressional District.

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—A Republican Convention for the Ninth Congressional District is called to meet at Greenfield, Mass., on Dec. 20, to nominate a candidate for representative in the Forty-second Congress. Hon. WILLIAM B. WASHBURN has notified Gov. CLAFLIN of his resignation to take place on the 1st of January next. As soon as the necessary papers can be prepared an election will be ordered to fill the vacancy.

Probable Murder Last Night.

An affray occurred, last night, at the corner of Twenty-sixth street and Second-avenue, during which a man, whose name is unknown, was terribly beaten. There were a large number of persons engaged in the affair, but the Police succeeded in arresting only JOHN DONALDSON, PATRICK DOOLEY and JAMES DAGAN, who were locked up in the Eighteenth Precinct Station-house. The victim was taken to Bellevue Hospital in an insensible condition.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS.

The Senate Debate on the Investigation Question.

General Amnesty and Other Business—Gen. Sweet, of the Revenue Bureau—Kansas Settlers—The Georgia Senatorships.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—There is a prospect of renewal in the Senate to-morrow of the debate of last week, though there is certainly no excuse for it. It is given out here to-night that Mr. TRUMBULL will again move to insert in the resolution of instructions to the new Committee on Investigations, the portions which the caucus of Friday agreed to strike out, which is the following clause in relation to the civil service, and also the power to send for persons and papers, and employ a clerk:

And also to consider the expediency of so amending the laws under which appointments to the public service are now made as to provide for withdrawing the public service from being used as an instrument of political power or patronage.

The action of the President, under the operation of the law which Mr. TRUMBULL himself proposed in the last Congress, renders it almost an insult on the part of the Senate to undertake at this time such an investivation as this clause contemplates, and if Mr. TRUMBULL persists in forcing a vote in the Senate upon it, his apparent design can hardly be concealed, even by such warm resentment as he exhibited in his former speeches on this subject. His renewal of the proposal is made directly upon the expectation that some Republicans who voted against instructing the Committee in advance of its organization will change their positions now. The ablest Democratic Senator said a day or two ago that if he had been able to select the most adroit scheme to divide the Republican Party and embitter the factions against each other, he could not have conceived a more promising effort than has been made by Mr. TRUMBULL. Senator CONKLING will enliven whatever proceedings may take place by giving Senator SCHURZ and his confederates a chance to vote for one of their own propositions. He will move to instruct the Committee to proceed at once to investigate the general order of business of the New-York Custom-house. This, certainly, ought to satisfy the gentlemen. In addition to this the country will soon have investigation enough to satisfy the most extravagant demand. The House Committee on Banking and Currency have under contemplation a proposition to send a subcommittee to New-York to examine the failure of the Ocean National Bank, and Mr. LYNCH's Committee on Expenditures at the Treasury Department will shortly begin work in earnest on the Hodge and Johnson Marden defalcations.

AMNESTY.

As soon as the Senate has finished the question now before it on the resolution of instructions to the new Senate Committee of Investigations the General Amnesty bill will very probably be taken up for consideration, though there are at sever other measures struggling for precedence in getion. Among them are Senator MORTON's resolution for adjournment on the third Monday in May; the proceedings against recusant Kuklux witnesses, and the bill touching the administration of the Eight-hour law toward certain "men of Massachusetts," as Mr. SUMNER calls them.

POST-MASTER-GENERAL BRIGE.

An order will be issued to-morrow from the War Department placing Pay-master-General BRIGE on the retired list at his own request.

THE MINISTER TO PERU.

Hon. THOMAS L. SMITH, United States Minister to Peru, arrived here this morning on leave of absence, obtained on account of ill health. It is possible that he may not return, as he is being urged by leading Republicans of North Carolina to accept the nomination as their candidate for Governor. He will probably leave here for his home, in that State, on Wednesday of this week.

THE INTERNAL REVENUE OFFICE.

Gen. S. J. SWART, of Illinois, who will probably be confirmed as First Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue at the next Executive Session of the Senate, served during the war as an officer of volunteers from Wisconsin, was wounded at Stone River, from the effects of which he has partially lost the use of one of his arms, and subsequently distinguished himself by quelling the insurrection of rebel prisoners at Camp Douglas, Chicago. He was among the first Supervisors of Internal Revenue appointed by President GRANT, and brings to his new office not only acknowledged capacity, but also years of active experience.

PERSONAL.

The dinner to Gov. WASHBURN, of Massachusetts, by his former colleagues in the House, will take place on Tuesday evening. There have been invited, besides the members of the Massachusetts delegation, Judge POLAND, of Vermont; Mr. BLAIR, of Michigan, who is the successor of Mr. WASHBURN, as Chairman of the Committee on Claims, and Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, who was associated with him on the Committee during his entire service as its Chairman.

Secretary BELKNAP will this Winter keep house in the fine and eligible residence at the corner of H-street and Madison-place, and Mrs. BOWER, the widowed sister of the late Mrs. BELKNAP, will do the honors incumbent upon the position, assisted by two sisters of the Secretary, Miss BELKNAP and Mrs. WALCUTT, who are expected after the Holidays.

POST-OFFICE LOCKS.

The Postmaster-General will in a day or two decide what kind of lock shall be used in the Government Post-office for lock-boxes. The decision is made at the request of the architect of the Treasury, who has been applied to by many of the lock companies to use their respective manufactures in the Post-office buildings under his supervision. He declined to decide, and referred the whole matter to the Post-office Department, where a committee was selected to examine the various styles, and report. The committee consisted of Judge J. M. EDMUNDS, local post-master at Washington; R. W. GURLEY, Superintendent of Letter-carriers, and JAMES T. ADAMS, locksmith of the Treasury Department.

A KANSAS SETTLER'S CASE.

The Solicitor of the Interior Department was engaged all day yesterday in listening to arguments in the case of settlers in Kansas who claim patents to certain lands within the grants of public lands to the Lawrence, Leavenworth and Galveston, and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroads. The arguments will be continued to-morrow and until concluded.

THE GEORGIA SENATORS.

The Committee on Privileges and Elections held a meeting yesterday and considered the Georgia contested election case between FOSTER BLODGETT and JAMES M. NORWOOD, to succeed Dr. MILLER, whose term expired last Spring. BLODGETT was elected by the same Legislature which elected Dr. MILLER, and which, under the Constitution of Georgia, postponed the election of the succeeding, which is the present Legislature of Georgia, so that while this Legislature was chosen before the expiration of Dr. MILLER's term, it did not meet and organize till some months later, when it elected Mr. NORWOOD. The question at issue is the construction of the law of 1866, which provided for the election of United States Senators by the Legislature chosen last before the occurrence of a vacancy. Does the word chosen in the law imply and include the meeting and organization? If so, Mr. BLODGETT was legally elected. If the word means no more than chosen, then Mr. NORWOOD will be admitted. The Legislature which elected Mr. BLODGETT had already chosen at least four Senators, or, as any rate, four had come up to the capital from that State since there had been any new Legislature chosen. It would seem from a casual consideration that it was about time a new Legislature had a chance at this business. It is understood that the Committee has some such notion, and will report in favor of Mr. NORWOOD. He is a Democrat.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—1 A. M.—The area of highest barometer continues in the South Atlantic States as on Saturday night, and the pressure has risen slightly on the Middle and East Atlantic coast, with partially cloudy and clearing weather, and light winds. The low barometer which was in Texas has moved north-eastward to the Ohio, with rain in the valley of that river, and snow to the northward. The area of low barometer on the upper lakes has moved north-east, and the winds have entirely subsided. The pressure has risen in the north-west with falling temperature; it has fallen quite low in California and Oregon, with brisk winds and rain.

PROBABILITIES.

The low barometer in the Ohio Valley will probably move north-eastward to the lower lakes, with snow on Monday. Rising barometer and north-westerly winds are probable for the upper lakes. Partially cloudy weather and light winds in the immediate Atlantic coast; south and south-easterly winds in the Gulf coast. The area of low barometer on the Pacific coast move eastward into the interior.

Dangerous winds are not anticipated, except for the Pacific coast. Rain commenced last night throughout California.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT.

Snow was reported last night at Cheyenne, Wyoming; Corinne, Utah, and Denver, Colorado. It was foggy at Salamanca and clearing up after. A storm at Leavenworth, Kansas. The temperature at Key West, Fla., was 68°, and at Virginia City, Montana, 8°. Heavy snow continued this morning at Cheyenne. Rain was reported from Nashville, Tenn. A fog and mist were reported from Charleston, S. C.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Norfolk, Va.; Savannah; and Jacksonville, Fla. At Key West the thermometer stood at 68°; at Fort Benton, Missouri, 8° below zero, and at Virginia City, Montana, 7° below zero. Snow fell this evening at Omaha, Denver and Virginia City; as the latter place the temperature was 9° below zero. It was clearing up after a storm, at Buffalo, N. Y., and the reported weather at Cairo, Ill., and Memphis, Tenn. Upon the summit of Mount Washington, New-Hampshire, the barometer read 20.78, and the thermometer 10°; the weather was cloudy, with a heavy westerly gale blowing. The temperature at Cheyenne, Wyoming, was 4°; at Key West, Fla., 72°; at Vicksburg Miss., 70°.

Philadelphia's Dilemma Ended—The Grand Duke's Reward Awarded by Lot.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph, Dec. 16.

That grave problem as to who is entitled to the $25 which ALEXIS left for the hero who stopped the horses, has at last been solved. The knotty question was referred to a committee of three, who passed many sleepless nights in endeavoring to find the truth, "although it was found in the centre." After examining a mountain of affidavits and filing several huge folios with evidence of the claimants, they at last, upon the suggestion of the Chairman, tossed up for it, and the money was given to Mr. CHARLES J. WOLBERT.

LIFE ON THE ERIE.

Brilliant Mismanagement of the Railroad Directors.

Stupidity Added to Their Many Other Virtues—Twenty Miles of Freight-Cars Blocked at Port Jervis—Insufficient Motive Power.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Saturday, Dec. 16, 1871.

The sudden closing of the canals has thrown an extra amount of business on the Erie Railway. The management of the road, however, is so absurd that really there is not sufficient motive power at the command of the Company to move the trains fast enough. The consequence is that the track is blockaded at different points daily, greatly delaying passenger trains and all other traffic. More particularly is this the case at the ends of divisions, and the greatest jam of cars occurs at this station, the junction of the Eastern and Delaware Division. Another cause of the blockade is the removal of the repair shops of the Company from this place. Now, a locomotive that is disabled here must be sent either to Jersey City or Susquehanna Depot, the one eighty-six miles away, the other over one hundred. There are at present probably thirty-five engines in the shops at Jersey City awaiting repairs, which would have been available in the present emergency if the shops had been here.

For some days past the yard at this station has been entirely filled with trains of all kinds waiting for engines to move them either east or west. The accumulation of trains has been constant for the past two or three days; until yesterday not only the yard was filled, but the main track for three miles west of here, and between two and three miles east. Every effort of the station authorities to get things clear proved unavailing, and suspension of business along the whole of the two divisions was inevitable unless something were done. Trains were constantly arriving, and there was no way to make a passage for passenger trains. The Cincinnati express arrived at Delaware Bridge, three miles west of Port Jervis, yesterday noon, and was held three hours. Track room was obtained only by sending freight-trains out ahead of the express, the last being but five minutes ahead of it, with orders to keep out of the way. It was a dangerous, but the only way out of the dilemma. Express trains from the east were held from half an hour to an hour within half a mile or a mile of the depot. The mail-train west was obliged to take the eastward-bound track for some distance. Some of the managers from head-quarters came up, but apparently saw no way to relieve matters. Finally, orders were issued to abandon all coal trains for two days. This removed a part of the difficulty, and by persistent and unceasing labor all day yesterday, all night last night and all day today, the switches are pretty well cleared, although there are hundreds of cars here yet that should have reached their destinations many days ago. There are over two hundred cars on the switches here, loaded with freight for this station, which have been necessarily scattered miles apart, and which it has been impossible to get near the freight-house. Trains, with freight for other places, have been broken up and put here and there, which it will be necessary to make up again before they can be shipped to their destination. Eastward-bound and westward trains have been huddled together indiscriminately. Even if a second jam does not occur, and it is probable that one will, it will take days to right matters here. Loss both to the Company and to parties having goods on the road must necessarily be large—to the Company thousands of dollars daily. The cars that were packed on the switches and track here yesterday would, if placed one after another, extend a distance of twenty miles. Four locomotives have been sent on from a western division, which will materially lessen the difficulty of moving trains.

Coal will commence running to-morrow.

Women's Work—Female Doctors Views on the Subject.

There was a little meeting at a private residence in Boston a few days ago, the immediate object of which was to listen to an essay by Miss CATHERINE BEECHER, who is endeavoring to start a movement for the organization of an institution for the education of women in the duties which belong distinctively to her sex. Among those present were Prof. STOWE, Mrs. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Mrs. JULIA WARD HOWE, Mrs. SARGENT, several clergymen, and others. In her essay Mrs. BEECHER defined the "woman's profession" as the conservation and management of the family; and said that its three general departments are the duties of housekeeping, the duties of a mother of a family, and the social and educational duties which are involved in the position of a family. To be a good housekeeper, she said, a woman needs to know something of architecture, of the principles of warming and ventilation, landscape gardening, floriculture, horticulture and agriculture. The fitting up and adornment of a home introduces the fine arts. She must understand how to select good provisions, articles of diet, and should know how to look after the clothing of the family, to make and mend it. Few of these home duties can be learned by book or word of mouth. A woman must practice these things herself; only the science and the theory can be learned from books. For the proper care of health a woman must have an acquaintance with the principles of physiology, hygiene and therapeutics, and as a part of this comes the nursing of the sick. Next come the social duties, the hospitality to relatives and friends and the duties of neighbors—visits to the sick, the support of schools and charitable institutions. Something should be known also of the care of domestic animals, and a good deal of the financial management of home affairs. Added to all this is the necessity for knowledge of the care of infants and the education of children, which is of the first importance, and is now almost wholly neglected.

Mrs. STOWE said it was with women just as it was with farms. It used to be said that books were useless. After a while it began to be found out that the men who studied about soils and their ingredients could do things that those who did not study the books could not do. It was said that woman's common sense was enough. "O, you just marry her and give her a family and she will find a way to do things," and she is married and put into a house full of water-pipes making horrible noises that send her, and springing a leak, and uncontrollable furnace that roars and scares her again, and sends its fumes through the house. Her husband is away at his office and she is left in a maze. Mrs. STOWE said it was like being in an enchanted castle—when you didn't know what would go off next. She had a house with so many conveniences in it that they couldn't sleep in their beds. Some of them were springing a leak. They sent for a plumber, and he came and spent two or three hours flirting with the girls. She said if she were to go to housekeeping again she would certainly buy books and study plumbing, and get at the bottom of these things. She gave an amusing account of her experience with ranges which had to be supplied with new boilers and furnaces, with which they were obliged to sit up nights. She learned a good many things when she went to school, and, among other things, how to make hydrogen gas and fluoric acid, but she did not find out anything about making bread, which was also a chemical process.

Railroad Accident in New-Jersey—Three Men Killed.

On Saturday evening three men were walking eastward on the track of the Morris and Essex Railroad between Milburn and Summit, when they met a passenger-train going westward. They were on the north track, walking side by side. Before the train reached them they stepped off this track to the south track, continuing their journey while the train passed them. In the noise and glare of light they did not see or hear a train coming behind them from the west. Before they could be apprised of their danger, and before the engineer could stop his train, the locomotive was upon them. It was going at full speed, save the slight check that could be put upon it by "reversing steam," and the unfortunate travelers were dashed to death in an instant. They were thrown from the track, and when at last the train was stopped the life of each was found to be extinct.

FOURTH-AVENUE RAILROAD.

Report of the Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen—Some Very Curious Provisions—General Dissatisfaction of Adjacent Property-Holders.

In consequence of the state of public sentiment with regard to the frequent slaughter of men, women and children by the locomotives of the Harlem Railroad, the Board of Aldermen appointed a special committee to consider the subject and report measures of protection. The Aldermen appointed to this most important duty were GEORGE H. MITCHELL, who, until within a very recent period kept the Florence Saloon, an underground gin-mill on Broadway, corner of Houston-street, and GEORGE W. PLUNKITT, a butcher of Washington market. It is but just to these Aldermen to say that though absolutely uneducated men, they have furnished a report which for apparent innocence and real adroitness is without a parallel. They first acknowledge the rights of the property-holders, and admit that they gave up considerable ground to the railway for the purpose of obtaining transit to Harlem. They acknowledge that the railway is used for other purposes, and that the accommodation pledged in the charter is not given. And having laid down these premises, which are incontestible, they proceed to propose that ground for two additional tracks should be given to Mr. VANDERBILT to obtain that accommodation, though experience has proved that it by no means follows that they are to get it by reason of this sacrifice. They then take up the question of security to the lives, limbs and property of citizens now imperiled by the eighty trains which rush over the Fourth-avenue daily. They propose that the track shall be sunk from Forty-ninth-street until it merges in the present cut and tunnel from from which point it is carried on a viaduct to One Hundred and Eleventh-street. They propose that from this point up to Harlem Bridge it shall be carried on another viaduct to be solidly constructed of masonry, with iron bridges over the streets. But the track between the depot at Forty-second-street and Forty-ninth-street is to continue on its present level, that is to say, flush with the streets. Now, as it happens this is by far the most dangerous part, for here trains are backing and switching and crossing in every direction. To ladies and to men of timid natures, a crossing here has considerable terrors, for, whichever way the eye turns, a brazen monoch comes snorting and puffing, ready to crush out the life and hurl away the mangled body of the unwary or the frightened. To guard against this, the Committee propose two bridges for vehicles at Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh streets, and two for foot passengers at Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth. As the streets at Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh are a dead level, it is difficult to see how the engineer will gain the necessary elevation without making the bridges of prodigious length, and therefore of prodigious cost. The material is to be of iron, and will be terrible for the horses, so that teamsters will prefer to make a long detour round by Forty-second-street, which is now full enough with carriages and greedy VANDERBILT's dirt cart cars, and will be constantly blocked when the traffic of so many additional streets is forced into it. The guileless Aldermanic Committee, not satisfied with delivering over the Fourth-avenue in this wholesale manner to the railroad company, mildly propose that the work shall be approved by the engineer of the Department of Public Works, and that one-half of the entire cost shall be borne by the City. Why is the City to pay half the expense of improvement to the Vanderbilt railways? It is an answered that it is in consideration of his making these improvements and laying another double track to Harlem for the benefit of the up-town people, that we relinquish to Mr. VANDERBILT the right of the property-holders, and admit that they gave up considerable ground to the railway for the purpose of obtaining transit to Harlem. They acknowledge that the railway is used for other purposes, and that the accommodation pledged in the charter is not given. And having laid down these premises, which are incontestible, they proceed to propose that ground for two additional tracks should be given to Mr. VANDERBILT to obtain that accommodation, though experience has proved that it by no means follows that they are to get it by reason of this sacrifice. TWEED AT THE BAR.

His Arraignment Before Judge Bedford on Saturday.

He is Committed Without Bail—Subsequent Proceedings Before Judge Barnard—He is Released on Five Thousand Dollars' Bail.

WM. M. TWEED, whose arrest on a charge of felony, on Friday, caused great excitement among his adherents, was on Saturday arraigned before Judge BEDFORD in the Court of General Sessions. An immense concourse of spectators was gathered there, who greeted TWEED with mingled cheers and hisses when he was brought into Court, shortly after 11 A. M. The following is the substance of the indictment, stripped of its technicalities:

It commences by alleging in the fourth section of the act of April 26, 1870, which empowered the Mayor, the Controller and the President of the Board of Supervisors to audit all liabilities incurred previous to that date, and that the amount which should be found due should be provided for by the issue of revenue bonds, payable during 1871, and that the Board should include in the ordinance levying the taxes for the year 1871, an amount sufficient to pay said bonds and the interest thereon, and that such claims should be paid by the Controller to the party or parties entitled to receive the same. That at the time the act became a law A. OAKEY HALL was Mayor, RICHARD B. CONNOLLY Controller, and WILLIAM M. TWEED President of the Board of Supervisors. That, in their individual capacity, they became auditors of the public trust, and, as such, were bound to perform all the duties faithfully. That, on the 5th of May, said auditors met and passed the following resolution:

"That the County Auditor (meaning JAMES WATSON) collect from the Board of Supervisors all bills and liabilities against the County incurred prior to the 30th day of April, 1870, and that the evidence of the same should be the authorization of the same by said Board, or certificate of its Clerk or President, and that, thereupon, said County Auditor annex the vouchers to the appropriate blanks for signatures of A. O. HALL, WM. M. TWEED and R. B. CONNOLLY, and payment afterward."

He is charged with fraudulently writing his name upon certain papers purporting to be claims against the County, and of thus receiving for his own use large sums of money. One of the papers referred to is a voucher for bill from KETCHUM & CO. This claim, bearing TWEED's signature, was subsequently audited by the County Auditor, and signed by Mayor HALL, and subsequently signed by R. B. CONNOLLY. TWEED is charged with misrepresentation; as the claim had never passed the Board of Supervisors, and could have been found on record in the office, and that the claim was unjust and blank; and that though some work had been done and some materials furnished, yet they were so summarily included in the items of the claim indorsed by W. M. TWEED that the specific and actual portion done the jurors could not say, but that the entire account was not true—phrases which are stated to have been done in that claim, and that W. M. TWEED so knew at the time.

The second count charges that W. M. TWEED caused to be certified as correct by him as President of the Board of Supervisors certain false claims, on the strength of which false certificates warrants for fraudulent payments were issued. The false certificate bearing the signature, "WM. M. TWEED, Ch'n," thereby leading any one to suppose that the claims had been legally acted upon. That afterward the County Auditor prefixed the following words and figures to the claims:

COUNTY AUDIT NO. —. COUNTY EXPENDITURE.

The County of New-York to KETCHUM & CO., Dr.

12—For unmanned bill punching, &c., done in armories and drill-rooms, May 15 to July 17, 1869, $41,491.

Interest made up to June 30, 1870, $2,907 67. The total amounts to $44,398 67.

That afterward, in the further pursuance of the directions of the resolution, and under the section of the act mentioned, the County Auditor would annex a claim to the proper blank.

CITY OF NEW-YORK, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, June 24, 1870.

The undersigned, in pursuance of section 4, chapter 382, laws 1870, certify that they have audited the annexed bill of KETCHUM & CO., and have allowed the same at the sum of $44,398 67.

Dated New-York, June 24, 1870.

———, Mayor.
———, Controller.
———, President of Board of Supervisors.

That the County Auditor, in the further pursuance of the direction of said resolution, would present this blank annexed to the pretended claim to Mayor HALL and Controller CONNOLLY, and also to WILLIAM M. TWEED, for their signatures and action, and that these persons would then make their signatures upon the blank paper and return the same to the Controller, &c., and the claim was then returned into the possession of the County Auditor who annexed another blank as follows:

CITY OF NEW-YORK, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, June 24, 1870.

The claim of KETCHUM & CO. against the County of New-York, having been audited by the Mayor, Controller and President of the Board of Supervisors, in pursuance of and as authorized by section 4 of the act chapter 382, laws of 1870, the Controller hereby certifies that the said claim is correct, and that the full settlement of all demands ordering therefrom. The County Auditor would draw a warrant for the above-stated sum, viz.: $44,398 67, to the order of KETCHUM & CO., "County Liabilities," and upon payment receive and file full release and acquittance therefrom.

———, Controller.

And the County Auditor presented this in the usual course of his duty to RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, Controller; and said Controller then made his signature, "Richard B. Connolly," prefixed to the printed word Controller. Then the County Auditor drew a warrant, dated the 27th of June, 1870, signed by OAKEY HALL, Mayor, RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, Controller, and JOS. B. YOUNG, Clerk Board of Supervisors, and countersigned by S. C. LYNDE, Jr., as County Book-Keeper, which warrant was as follows:

County Liabilities, Requisition of C. Lynde, Jr., County Book-Keeper.

To the County Treasurer of New-York, at the National Broadway Bank, No. 1,322, Broadway.

NEW-YORK, June 27, 1870.

PAY KETCHUM & CO., or order, forty-four thousand three hundred and ninety-eight and sixty-seven hundredths dollars, for [illegible] plumbing, etc., for various armories and drill-rooms, May 15, to July 17, 1869.

Interest made up to June 30, 1870, $2,907 67. The total amounts to $44,398 67.

$44,398 67. A. OAKEY HALL, Mayor.
RICHD. B. CONNOLLY, Controller.
J. B. YOUNG, Clerk Bd. Sup.

The indictment further charges that Wm. M. TWEED converted the amount of the warrant so obtained to his own use, and that he signed the warrant as a fraudulent act, and against the peace of the people of the State of New-York and their dignity."

Mr. TWEED took his place at the well-known spot appropriated to prisoners on trial. At his left was Mr. TWEED, Jr., as his right his counsel, Mr. JOHN GRAHAM, Ex-Judge FULLERTON, J. E. BURRILL, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD and WILLIAM STOUGHTON. On the people's behalf appeared Ex-Judge GARVIN, District-Attorney, Mr. CHAS. O'CONOR and Gen. BARLOW.

As the suggestion of the District-Attorney, the Judge ordered that the accused be committed until his counsel was prepared to enter a plea for him. The commitment was made out as follows:

NEW-YORK GENERAL SESSIONS OF THE PEACE.—Dated 16th day of December, 1871.—The People of the State of New-York vs. Wm. M. Tweed.—On Indictment for Felony.—On motion of the District-Attorney, ordered that the said Wm. M. Tweed stand committed to the custody of the Warden of the City Prison of the City of New-York, without bail, or until thence delivered by due course of law.

Extract from minutes.

JOHN SPARKS, Deputy Clerk.

The DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—I move his commitment without bail. If counsel have anything to say on the question they had better say it.

Mr. GRAHAM—We deny the right of the Court to make a motion itself against the defendant. The right to be bailed is the right of the defendant. He is the party to move.

Judge BEDFORD—Excuse me. The Court has made no motion. The Court desired to understand perfectly what motions the people had to make; but the Court made no motions at all; it sits here to entertain motions, not to make any.

Mr. GRAHAM—Then I will prove elsewhere, was consummate. There was nothing said about commitment without bail until some minutes after the order was made. We suspect the quarter from which the suggestions came. We dear the intent of the Court to extend that order in any way. The decision of the Court was that he be committed in the usual way. We can only suspect the quarter from which the suggestion came that the order did not suit the interests of the people; but we are not positively aware of the quarter in which it originated; but we deny the right of any person—and to save the rights of the defendant we interpose this protest—to make a motion against the defendant in reference to a right which the law gives to have the benefit of, he is to be the moving party, and the prosecution to be the resisting parties, if they oppose his right to bail. The right to bail is a constitutional right, and there are no facts before the Court to show that this is a proper case to interpolate such words as are proposed. The Court has no judicial knowledge of the facts of accusations; nothing but a bulky indictment; there are no papers before the Court; it doesn't know that there are any circumstances of aggravation or any exculpations. The Court is bound to be ignorant of all that transpired outside in reference to this case. Now, in what way a paper produced by the Grand Jury in any position, as I am prepared to show, to the current of decisions in this Court, for the last eight or ten years, is to be treated as the basis of such proceedings as is now sought to be adopted against this defendant, we are at a loss to conceive. If the Court undertook to introduce words into its order, it ought to have before it which certainly is not now before your petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus issue directed to the said [illegible], Sheriff and Warden of the City Prison, commanding him to produce the body of your petitioner before your Honor at such time and place as your Honor shall deem and there make

In other words, this supposed-to-be-lifeless statute of justice became suddenly slipped down from its pedestal and turned itself into the prosecutor of this defendant and made a motion against him, and with a view to anticipate the exercise of the right which is guaranteed him by the Constitution of the United States and by the Constitution of the State of New-York.

Mr. GARVIN read the averment to the indictment.

Mr. GRAHAM—We now submit to the Court, because it seems to be proper we should do it before we enter upon the testimony to establish the fact, whether the Court desires upon these proceedings that this commitment should be falsified. It alleges an untruth. A motion was made by the learned Judge himself; we are able to prove it by any number of the gentlemen of the Press who were within hearing distance, and who recorded it stenographically. The District-Attorney was placed in a position where he had apparently to sanction this action, and we are prepared to prove that the suggestion that the words "without bail" be interpolated in the order—it was originally made without these words—emanated from this Judge, and he made the request to the prosecuting officer, not only privately, but publicly, that he should make the motion in this petition.

Judge BARNARD—I cannot go into this matter in the habeas corpus. It is proper for you, if such a breach of duty was committed, to apply to some other tribunal than this. When I granted the writ I deemed it essential that a proper case to have a defendant brought before me for the object of bail; and that being the object, I am prepared to hear anything upon it.

Mr. GRAHAM then read from the Second Revised Statutes, Fifth Edition, page 407, on "Mock Auctions," which provides upon conviction for this offense a term of imprisonment in the State Prison for not more than three years or in the County Jail for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding $1,000. What is a cheat and fraud at common law? As I understand the statute of this indictment, it is that Mr. TWEED, by means of private tokens, fraudulently and criminally manufactured, lent himself to the abstraction or procuring from the treasury of the country large sums of money which were not due to any person whatever, and which were used for his own sole and exclusive aggrandizement, or else for that of himself and his associates.

Judge BARNARD—In regard to the people being injured, or any other parties being injured, these are matters of reference, and must be brought out at the trial. The only questions that are brought before me today are—first, whether there shall be any bail, and secondly, how much?

Mr. GRAHAM—It bears on the amount.

Judge BARNARD—Bail is not a matter of right. It is a matter of discretion with the Justice. If a person is seen by a Justice, or the officer who brings him into Court, in the commission of a serious offense, he would be justified in refusing bail entirely. If, on the contrary, they become satisfied that the purpose of the law and the ends of justice do not require it, and that in making bail, then it becomes a question of the amount.

Mr. GRAHAM—Then we ask the Court to fix the amount of bail in this case, unless the other side wishes to be heard in opposition to the application. The crime carries with it a penalty of three years in the State Prison, one year in the Penitentiary, and a fine of $1,000. And the Counsel has a right to vibrate between these three designations, and take such two of them, or any of them, as it sees fit.

Mr. O'CONOR—Your Honor having somewhat shortened the argument of the learned counsel for the accused, perhaps my remarks should in some respects be curtailed. Yet, as the general question has been made, that this indictment is not open to attack, I do not see that the learned counsel should not be heard. Whether he does or not, this Court has no right to know, because nothing has been said about it here. Nothing has transpired in presence of the Court on part of the defense, which justifies the belief in the mind of the Court that just now passed. It is my duty to show to your Honor that the offense as an indictable offense, and that if convicted under this indictment the accused is liable to the full extent of the punishment which the law gives in a lower grade, as may be deemed expedient and proper, under the circumstances. Consequently, I will address myself, in the first place, to the indictment and the nature of the offense therein contained, and endeavor to show to your Honor that in case the accused should be convicted by a petty jury, under the indictment, he will be liable to punishment according to the law at the discretion of the Court. See, Sir, what the offense is. Leaving out the words that my friend read, and reading only that which he omitted, and which is really the precise point before your Honor. I will bring the statute to your attention: "Every person who, by means of gross fraud or cheat at common law, designedly and with intent to defraud, shall obtain from any person the signature of any person to any written instrument the false making whereof would be punishable, shall on conviction be punished," &c. The particular charge in the first count in this indictment is the procurement of the signature of the Mayor of the City of New-York to that tiny certified certificate of audit, and that certificate of audit, inasmuch as it established the right to the payment of a sum of money by the Controller of the City of New-York to the person named in it, was one of those instruments the false making of which would be a forgery. Consequently the kind of signature obtained, and the document to which it was obtained were precisely of the description to bring the case within that branch of the act under which this indictment was presented. Mr. O'CONOR then went into the question whether the document was obtained by means of a gross fraud or cheat at common law, according to the terms of the indictment, and in doing this, examined into the peculiar nature of certificates of audit, entitling the person who held them to draw the public money. Then he went into the last and final question of the case, whether it was one in which bail should be taken at all. He defended the course of Judge BEDFORD at considerable length, and with great keenness, claiming that it was right and proper. He claimed also that the offense was not a bailable common offense, and when the matter was addressed to the discretion of the Judge, he was bound to consider the scandalous desecration of office involved, and the monstrous example the accused had set to others. He drew a comparison between the offender at the bar and the poor sick man whose prison cells were crowded, and then detailed the repentance this prisoner was contrasting it with the studied coolness showed to so great a villain. He insisted that this was no case for mercy; that the offender was not in ill or even delicate health, and that there was no reason why he should not go to prison. He concluded by saying that the speech he was not moved from the occasion, but spring from his honest convictions.

Judge BARNARD—This indictment is in proper form, and charges in legal language the defendant with the commission of crime. He makes application to this Court for bail. Bail is denied in the Court of General Sessions, or they refuse to accept it. It would be proper to do this or any other country, for a Justice of a criminal Court to tell a Grand Jury to commit a man without bail. Very frequently he may be indicted erroneously. The question of bail arises on the face of the indictment, or upon some extraneous proof. Now, this indictment shows that it is a felony, and the highest punishment is three years imprisonment, and knowing nothing whatever in regard to the defendant, or in regard to the offense charged in the indictment, and treating that offense the same as any other offense of like character, a proper subject of bail, I direct you to give bail in the sum of $5,000. (Applause.)

Mr. GRAHAM, in concurring with the decision of the Court, referred to a decision in an appeal in the matter of the proprietors of the Westfield, where the same principle of law, he said, was sustained by Judge SUTHERLAND.

Mr. TWEED was then released from custody, Mr. ALFRED B. SANDS, the Fulton-street druggist, who resides at No. 128 East Twenty-sixth-street, becoming his bondsman. The ex-most prisoner immediately went to the Metropolitan Hotel, where he was visited by his friends, in crowds, during the remainder of the day.

More Spectral Faces in Window-Panes.

San Francisco, emulous of the fame of some of the smaller cities of Ohio, now reports that it has a weird face on a window-pane, the story being related by the Bulletin of the 9th inst., as follows:

"The precise locality of this wonderful house is No. 2,119 Mason-street, between Lombard and Chestnut. The house is a small, unpretending two-story, and occupied by French widow named JOERGENS, whose husband died September, 1870, while on a visit to France. Mme. JOERGENS states that everything has gone badly with her since her husband's death, as his relatives have been trying to get certain property out of her hands. She states that on Monday some children who had been playing on the street came to her and said there was a man's face on the window of the upper story. She ran upstairs, but could see no face. She then went out on the street, when it was plainly discernible. On the afternoon of Monday Mme. JOERGENS states she examined the window-pane closely, and that just to the right of and seemingly beyond the picture first observed, she saw the face and shoulders of another man, having the features of her deceased husband. She says that she was loth to believe in the existence of anything supernatural, and fearing that her eyes might have made the fools of her other senses, she called in several friends who knew her husband when in the flesh, and they substantiated her opinion. This figure remained about three hours, and gradually disappeared, but the other remained. Each day it grew more and more distinct. The face is a full one; the head is resting on the left shoulder. The expression of the features is one of contemplative sorrow. In it a gentleman yesterday recognized the features of a French real estate agent, now alive and in this city, and mentioned this fact to Mme. JOERGENS, who immediately stated that the person referred to was a relative of hers. Every effort has been made to obliterate the features, but without success. Ammonia, vinegar, alcohol, soap-suds, lye, and every variety of erasive matter, has been used on the window, but the face is as stubborn as Banquo's ghost, and serenely contemplates all efforts to remove it."

ADMITTED TO BAIL.

The Prisoner Released by Justice Barnard on Five Thousand Dollars' Bail—The Motion Strongly Resisted by Counsel for the People.

Sheriff BRENNAN and the "Boss," after Judge BEDFORD's refusal to accept bail, retired to the District-Attorney's office, where Mr. GARVIN showed the most delicate attentions to the portly felon. When the writ of habeas corpus had been prepared, due word was sent to the party and they at once emerged on their road to the Tombs. The Sheriff at once brought Mr. TWEED before Judge BARNARD, seated in the Supreme Court, and Mr. GRAHAM at once commenced to demand that his client should be admitted to bail.

"This writ of habeas corpus has interposed Mr. TWEED in his transit from the Court to the City Prison. The order, a copy of which is annexed, is entitled in the prosecution an indictment for felony, on motion that the said TWEED stand committed to the custody of the Warden of the City Prison without bail until thence delivered up by due course of law. Mr. GRAHAM, reading from the petition, continued:

"That your petitioner is desirous of being bailed upon the indictment on which the prosecution in the said Court is founded, it being, as your petitioner is informed and believes, an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, entitled "an Act to punish gross frauds and suppress mock auctions, passed April 9, 1853; that your petitioner has not as yet made any application to be bailed upon the said indictment to any Court or officer whatever, nor has any such application been made on his behalf."

Then in order to meet these words "without bail" in the order this averment is answered in the petition:

"That the order of commitment, as originally made, and (as your petitioner is informed, believes and avers,) signed, did not contain the words 'without bail,' but they were added to the order on the suggestion of the Court against the desires of your petitioner's counsel before they made an application to admit him to bail, and public protest and remonstrance against the action of the Court in that respect, whereupon the Court refused to receive the same, and your petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus issue directed to the said [illegible], Sheriff and Warden of the City Prison, commanding him to produce the body of your petitioner before your Honor at such time and place as your Honor shall deem and there make

Mr. GRAHAM—And the District-Attorney then made no motion to commit without bail.

Judge BEDFORD—He tells me he did.

Mr. GRAHAM—Not until fifteen or twenty minutes after.

Mr. FULLERTON—And not until after the order was signed.

Mr. GRAHAM—We protest against the right of the Court to substitute this order, or amend the order originally made.

Judge BEDFORD said he would hear the District-Attorney again on his motion, and any argument in reply. If no argument in reply was submitted, he would grant the motion.

The District-Attorney said he had no argument to make, and Mr. GRAHAM said he protested but did not argue.

Judge BEDFORD—Every person accused in this Court after the plea is entered, is either bailed or committed without bail.

Mr. GRAHAM—He makes no plea.

Judge BEDFORD—I believe the accused in this case did plead, and then the District-Attorney made the motion to which gentlemen object. To show that the Court has no feeling but that the law be carried out, I asked the District-Attorney to define his status, and he said he moved that the accused be committed without bail. A gentleman for the defense protests against such order. I shall give the order. I consider the motion made, and shall grant the order. I shall grant the motion, but give an opportunity to any of the gentlemen for the defense to offer an argument. If the District-Attorney's motion should not be granted; and in default of such argument, I deem it right and proper that the motion should be granted. I do not think the protest sufficient to warrant me in denying the motion.

Mr. GRAHAM—We conclude to make no application for bail to this Court. We consider the District-Attorney cannot make an affirmative motion upon our right. He cannot anticipate that we are going to make application for bail and to attempt to shut that off by the application of these words; because that will give rise to proof as to the course of the transaction in this Court.

Mr. FULLERTON—We make no motion to bail defendant, and do not oppose any motion by the District-Attorney.

Judge BEDFORD—Very well; the District-Attorney having made a motion, and there being no argument to the contrary, the Court grants it.

After the proceedings in the Court of General Sessions had terminated, Mr. TWEED was removed, in custody of the Sheriff, to an adjoining room, where he was detained for over an hour to give his counsel an opportunity to sue out a writ of habeas corpus. If he had been an ordinary thief he would have been marched right away to the Tombs in hand-cuffs, but being a swindler of millions, the Sheriff had a rich respect for him. Judge BARNARD was also near at hand, and Mr. GRAHAM at once applied to him for a writ of habeas corpus to bring up the body of WM. M. TWEED, now in custody of the Sheriff. The writ was promptly granted and at once served on the Sheriff, who, as a matter of form, had his prisoner outside the building at that moment, waiting for the service of the writ, which he knew was in preparation.

Mr. GRAHAM—We deny the right of the Court to commit without bail. If counsel have anything to say on the question they had better say it.

Mr. GRAHAM—We deny the right of the Court to make a motion itself against the defendant. The right to be bailed is the right of the defendant. He is the party to move.

Judge BEDFORD—Excuse me. The Court has made no motion. The Court desired to understand perfectly what motions the people had to make; but the Court made no motions at all; it sits here to entertain motions, not to make any.

Mr. GRAHAM—In order, we will prove elsewhere, was consummate. There was nothing said about commitment without bail until some minutes after the order was made. We suspect the quarter from which the suggestions came. We dear the intent of the Court to extend that order in any way. The decision of the Court was that he be committed in the usual way. We can only suspect the quarter from which the suggestion came that the order did not suit the interests of the people; but we are not positively aware of the quarter in which it originated; but we deny the right of any person—and to save the rights of the defendant we interpose this protest—to make a motion against the defendant in reference to a right which the law gives to have the benefit of, he is to be the moving party, and the prosecution to be the resisting parties, if they oppose his right to bail. The right to bail is a constitutional right, and there are no facts before the Court to show that this is a proper case to interpolate such words as are proposed. The Court has no judicial knowledge of the facts of accusations; nothing but a bulky indictment; there are no papers before the Court; it doesn't know that there are any circumstances of aggravation or any exculpations. The Court is bound to be ignorant of all that transpired outside in reference to this case. Now, in what way a paper produced by the Grand Jury in any position, as I am prepared to show, to the current of decisions in this Court, for the last eight or ten years, is to be treated as the basis of such proceedings as is now sought to be adopted against this defendant, we are at a loss to conceive. If the Court undertook to introduce words into its order, it ought to have before it which certainly is not now

CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

The home-made and imported works of CHAS. SCRIBNER & Co., and Company, WELFORD & Co., afford a rich and remarkable variety of books suitable for the Holidays. The delightful volume of Songs of the Heart, is in some respects the most desirable of this year's gift-books, on account of its pervading sentiment, as well as of its wide range and decided pictorial attractions. Here are heart poems of all kinds, from the solemn and intense to the lightest and cleverest society verses. STEDMAN'S New-England idyl of "The Doorstep," fitly introduces the collection, and Miss HALLOCK'S strong, religious touch makes a worthy companion poem in the drawing LUTTON has cut so well. Of the other illustrations, T. MORAN'S are the most remarkable. That this really great and original landscape artist is willing to devote part of his time to drawing on the wood is something for which picture lovers must be grateful. The splendid new volume on Insects at Home, by Rev. J. G. WOOD, author of Homes Without Hands, and Bible Animals, is one of this popular author's most charming and instructive works. The completed first series of "The Illustrated Library of Wonders," comprising twenty entertaining volumes, with 1,000 striking illustrations, is now presented in a neat black-walnut case and at reasonable cost. The two new volumes in the second series of this popular Library are Mountain Adventures, a collection of thrilling narratives, edited by HEADLEY, and The Wonders of Water, edited by SCHELE DE VERE. The same house still offer those favorites of other holidays—Songs of Home, Songs of Life, the elegantly illustrated Bitter Sweet and Kathrina, with Dr. HOLLAND'S other popular works. Letters to the Young, Gold Foil, &c.; those American classics, the writings of DONALD G. MITCHELL, Lady Geraldine's Courtship, illustrated by HERMSEE; Cotter's Saturday Night and Floral Belles.

Among works of a more thoughtful class are JOWETT'S incomparable translation of Plato, FROUDE'S History of England and Short Studies, (first and second series,) MOMMSEN'S standard History of Rome, CURTIS'S History of Greece, Lange's Commentary, the first volume of the Bible Commentary, &c. Nor should we omit the suggestion of a ready subscription to the beautiful Monthly as a most fitting and graceful gift. In the English department there is TENNYSON'S Idyls of the King, in imperial quarto, four parts in one, with thirty-seven exquisite full-page drawings on steel, from DORE'S masterly designs. Only a small number of this edition has been printed.

J. E. TILTON & Co., of Boston, (D. APPLETON & Co., New-York,) publish quite a number of excellent books for Holiday presentation purposes. Perhaps the one most interesting at the present time is an illustrated edition of The Last Tournament, TENNYSON'S new poem. In his pictures, Mr. HAMMATT BILLINGS has admirably caught the spirit of the poet, and has reproduced it in some of the finest specimens of imaginative and artistic work we have seen this season. The subtle idealism which the artist has given to the dream-pictures, and the expressive warmth of the interview between Tristram and Iseult of Ireland are both perfect in their way. TILTON & Co. also publish a completed edition of TENNYSON'S works, with illustrations by the same artist, and also a profusely illustrated edition of GOLDSMITH'S Deserted Village. In connection with this, we would state that the same house have issued a charming little chrome by BILLINGS, called "Confidence," which is sure to be greatly sought after during the present season.

The Century of Queens is the title of a beautiful presentation book published by JAMES MILLER. It contains interesting sketches from the lives of the Queens of England and Scotland during the sixteenth century. There are also fine steel portraits of each of them, and many illustrations in style and subject peculiar to the period in which they lived. A Book of Popular Fairy Tales, illustrated by GUSTAVE DORE, is also published by this house. The pictures are, of course, admirable, and the whole work is one of great merit. They have also made some selections from the poems of Mrs. BROWNING, which they issue in a handsome volume, under the heading of Poems of Memory and Hope. The Poetical Works of Robert Burns is a tastily bound volume, with several fine steel engravings. A Visit from Santa Claus is very cleverly illustrated by SCATTERGOOD.

A Christmas Case in Four Quarters, by Lady BARKER, is published by MACMILLAN & Co., and contains a highly entertaining account of four Christmas-day celebrations, spent respectively in England, Jamaica, India and New-Zealand. The manner in which those accustomed to the English holiday endeavor to conform to the same standard when in the tropics, is very humorously and pleasantly described. A Book of Golden Deeds of All Times and All Lands, is the title of a volume for children, which contains graphic descriptions of many instances in history of personal bravery in the sacrifice of life or happiness for the welfare of others. The book is illustrated by L. FROLICH, and the manner in which the great lesson it teaches is enforced is worthy of the highest commendation. Nine Years Old, by the author of St. Olaves, is an exceedingly attractive book, and the illustrations, by L. FROLICH, render it doubly so. It is certainly destined to be in great favor with youthful readers.

SOPHIE MAY has added another volume to the "Little Prudy's Flyaway Series." The book, which is published by LEE & SHEPARD, is called Aunt Madge's Story, and is bright and cheerful, as are all the stories of this versatile authoress. Prof. DE MILLE has written another series of books for boys called the "Young Dodge Club," and the first volume, Among the Brigands, is an account of the adventures of a party of young travelers in Italy, and is in the author's peculiar vein. The Whaleman's Adventure in the Sandwich Islands, by WM. H. THOMES, is one of the most entertaining books for boys published this season, as the author writes with the forcibleness of one who has himself passed through scenes similar to those he is describing.

PAUL DU CHAILLU'S Country of the Dwarfs, published by HARPER & BROTHERS, is an enticing account of adventures in Africa, with just enough exaggeration in it to sustain the interest without detriment to its general accuracy. Rev. F. O. MORRIS' work of Dogs and Their Doings, contains, besides the names and descriptions of the prominent breeds of dogs, incidents of their wonderful behavior under trying circumstances. To a child fond of pets of this kind, the information given in this book will be of great value.

G. P. PUTNAM & Co. have published a very handsome work, entitled Gallery of Landscape Painters, which comprises twenty-four large steel illustrations of American scenery from the paintings of G. L. BROWN, W. H. BEARD, Casilear, Coleman, Hart, Inness, Kensett, Smillie, and other artists. The engravings have been executed with the utmost care, and the characteristic features in the work of each artist admirably preserved. A great variety of subjects are embraced in the collection, as it comprises scenes from almost every section of the country, from the White Mountains to the Yosemite Valley. The publishers have also shown proper appreciation of the public taste by refraining from issuing long comments on the pictures, but instead publish a short account of the artist, and allow the reader to form his own opinion of the work.

Awful and Other Jingles, by P. R. S., contains a number of light humorous poems on social subjects, which have appeared, from time to time, in one of the daily papers.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, London, publish a beautiful series of carbon photographs, called Gems of Modern Belgian Art, taken from the masterpieces of PORTAELS, WAPPER, VERLAT, and other prominent living artists. There are notices of the painters and their works, and also an essay on the schools of Belgium and Holland, by WILLIAM B. SCOTT. The Haunted Crust, by KATHERINE SAUNDERS, published by the same house, contains a number of pleasant tales, especially adapted for the Christmas season. In the book, At the Back of the North Wind, GEORGE MACDONALD has told a wonderfully original and attractive story, and The Princes and the Goblin, by the same author, is as grotesquely frightful as the most exacting reader of fairy tales could wish. A Thousand and One Gems of English Poetry, collected by CHARLES MACKAY, is both handsomely bound and illustrated, and as the many choice selections made from the works of almost every English and American poet of note, is rendered useful as a book of reference. Birds and Their Nests, by MARY HOWITT, gives the history of the lives and habits of the principal varieties of these little creatures.

JAMES R. OSGOOD & Co. are to publish in a few days a series of sketches of travel in Europe made by AUGUSTUS HOPPIN. Many of them are of a humorous character, and the whole graphically depict the impression made on a traveler's mind by the different phases of city and country life in France, Germany and Switzerland. My Summer in a Garden, by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, published by them, consists of a delightful series of lively sketches concerning not only gardening, but almost everything else. They are illustrated by DARLEY. Among the many children's books few have been more deservedly popular than a short series of three volumes by GRACE GREENWOOD, issued fifteen years or more ago, and republished this year by this house as they have been several times before. The books are respectively Recollections of My Childhood, Stories from Famous Ballads, and History of My Pets. In these stories the author has not only drawn pictures of child life with great fidelity, but has taken these phases of youthful experience, that must readily call forth the sympathy, and increase the earnest and affectionate nature of the young reader. Especially is this the case in the last of the above-named volumes, and we can recall even now the urgent appeal of one little listener made many years since, to skip a particular story, as she didn't want to cry then. The present edition is very tastily bound. There are besides the poetical works of LONGFELLOW, newly issued in one volume, and containing more than 250 illustrations; also a Red-Line edition of BRET HARTE'S poems, with illustrations. This one volume containing all that he has thus far written.

Picture Poems for Young Folks, by MARIAN DOUGLAS, contains a number of charming pastoral scenes, which every child will recognize. The work is very handsomely bound and illustrated.

The Unknown River, by PHILIP GILBERT HAMERTON. Boston: ROBERTS BROTHERS. This is an elegant presentation book, describing a trip taken by an artist in a light boat down one of the small rivers in Eastern France, flowing into the Loire. The chief feature is the admirable manner in which the incidents of the voyage have been illustrated by the little-practiced art of etching, and the numerous pictures in the book bear testimony to the skill and fidelity with which the artist performed his work. The same house publishes Arabesques, by Mrs. RICHARD B. GREENOUGH, which is a very curiously designed book, and contains four fairy tales written in a quaint mediæval style. Unusual skill has been displayed in the construction of these stories, and they will be eagerly read by both young and old. Falstaff and His Companions, Silhouette illustrations, by PAUL KORNEWA. It is hardly necessary to say more of this book than that it is the work of KORNEWA, whose silhouette pictures have before this won him a well-merited reputation. The delineations are admirable, and afford an easy means of arriving at an artistic realization of a number of SHAKESPEARE'S finest characterizations. To these should be added another work by LOUISA M. ALCOTT, called Aunt Jo's Scrap-Bag, which is a delightful medley of story of New-England life and little snatches of experience across the Atlantic. Outlines to Shakespeare contains 101 superb engravings, by MORITZ RETZSCH, of striking scenes in various plays of the great writer. The Sermon on the Mount is a large volume, containing the illuminated text of this great discourse of our Saviour. The delicacy and taste with which Messrs. W. & G. HUDSLEY have done this work is almost without a parallel, and the artistic sense of the reader is gratified by merely turning over the pages. Lord HOUGHTON'S child-poem, Good Night and Good Morning, is beautifully illustrated with etchings by WALTER SEVERN. Sing Song: a Nursery Rhyme-Book, by CHRISTINA G. ROSSETTI, is full of amusing nonsense, and, with a happy illustration to each song. The New-Year's Bargain, by SUSAN COOLIDGE, is, instead, an agreeable Christmas story, and the Home Theatre, by MARY HEALY, offers a fund of amusement for one evening entertainment.

The Merrie Heart is a book of old and new fashioned nursery rhymes, illustrated in a wonderful manner, and must of necessity captivate the hearts of the little ones to whom it may be presented. It is published by CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, London.

DE WITT C. LENT & Co. publish a serial known as the Oakhurst Library. This consists of three delightful children's books, which are, respectively, Oakhurst, Laurence Linden Junior, and Fables for Little Folks.

FEW persons have been more successful in writing of child-life than JACOB ABBOTT, and he is now preparing another series to be called "The August Stories," the first volume of which, August and Eric, has already been published by DODD & MEAD. The same house also publishes a charming child's book, by JEROME HARRISON, entitled The Old Rock Room. Both of these books will undoubtedly meet with an enthusiastic reception.

The Land of the Vedas, by Rev. WILLIAM BUTLER, D. D., New-York, CARLTON & LANAHAN, contains a graphic account of India, its people, religion and principal places, together with many incidents of the Sepoy Rebellion, forming a work of great interest.

Dream Life, and Other Poems. By STOCKTON BATES, Philadelphia: CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER. These poems are very successfully written, and though none of them rise to a height of poetical inspiration sufficient to attract universal attention to their author, yet their easy rhythm and simple beauty will render them attractive to a large circle of readers.

A handsome gift-book is published by ALEXANDER MOORE of Boston, entitled The Wonders of the Yosemite Valley and of California, by Prof. SAMUEL KNEELAND. The work describes, in a clear and entertaining manner, the many beauties of this charming place, and aids the mind of the reader yet further in arriving at a just conception of it by a series of original photographs, which are admirably done.

The Palmetto Boys, by JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT; Philadelphia, WILLIAM B. EVANS & Co., is a charming story for children, detailing the incidents of a winter spent at the South during the war.

A very beautiful edition of BRYANT'S poem, The Story of the Fountain, has been issued by D. APPLETON & Co., with forty-two illustrations by leading American artists, among whom are FENN, HOWE, FREDERICKS and HOMER. As a gift-book, the work is exceptionally attractive.

SHELDON & Co. have published, under the title of Our Poetical Favorites, a large number of poems collated by Prof. ARABEL C. KENDRICK, from the best minor poems in the English language. The selection is unusually complete, and contains several poems which are now rarely met with.

H. B. DURAND publishes a charming little poem concerning Christmas, called Lady Elgiva, by M. S. B. It is very simply written, so as to be easily comprehended by the youngest.

Short Poems for Short People is the characteristic name of a volume of verses by EDGAR FAWCETT: published by FRANCIS B. FELT & Co. Some of these have appeared before in print, but there are many new ones, and the collection is singularly pleasing from the faithfulness with which it depicts the thoughts and feelings of childhood.

CHARLES S. FRANCIS publishes an allegorical story for children, translated from the German of CAROVE by SARAH AUSTIN.

T. WHITTAKER & Co., of this City, have republished a holiday edition of W. H. G. KINGSTON'S story, T. Marmaduke Wyvill, or The Midshipman, which has proved, by the ever recurring interest taken in reading it, to be one of the most entertaining boys' books ever written. ELLEN E. DICKENSON has written a Christmas story of more than ordinary interest, named Emmenuel, and there are two capital children's books, by Mrs. T. MARSHALL WARD, The Vagabond and Claude Spencer. The type and binding are also in good keeping with the stories.

Songs of the Spirit is a very elegant book, edited by Bishop ODENHEIMER, and published by ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. It consists of hymns, addressed especially to the Third Person of the Trinity, and is very complete in the selections it gives of many grand old Latin hymns, with the various versions that have been made from them by translators.

The Baby's Things.—By EDWARD ARBOTT. is a story in verse, adapted for Christmas Eve, and very tenderly told.

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Were one of three of the original proprietors still engaged in policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep none of all narrow and unworthy, subservient and unjust, and not to represent the great body of the people, as distinguished from personal factions. To occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation through out the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. That department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Tammany Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

The Great Reformers.

In the way of deliberate misrepresentation, nothing much more audacious has ever been published than the articles in two New-York journals about the appearance of SCHURZ and FENTON in the unexpected character of civil service reformers. An evening paper, for instance, coolly said—as coolly as if it believed it—that the object of Senators SHERMAN, CONKLING and others was to suppress the civil service reform movement; that they wished to suppress it because they were afraid of having their own appointments made the subject of an investigation; that the President's advisers in the Senate were responsible for the corruption of the civil service—a corruption which dates back to JACKSON's time—and that they were in a league to prevent any reform whatever from being carried out. Whether the writer of these charges could have repeated them aloud in a room without laughing is very doubtful, although their intrinsic impudence reveals a quality which might have carried him through the trial. If the paper in question did not know that each of these statements was an idle fabrication, concocted for the sole purpose of deceiving the public, its ignorance must be so great as to unfit it for the task which it has set before it of defending Gen. GRANT. We do not think that Gen. GRANT can be injured by this sort of malice. The journal referred to did not dare to enter into any explanation to justify its wild assertions. Let us supply that omission, and tell the public exactly what the Trumbull-Schurz debate meant. If there is any point of our statement which is wrong, we are quite ready to correct it the moment any [illegible] it out.

[illegible] endeavor to make a long story short, and say all over that there was a "Retrenchment Committee" in the last Congress, appointed at a time when there was a profound belief in the corruption of ANDREW JOHNSON's rule. It was a joint Committee of both Houses, and Senator SCHURZ was a member of it. It went to the Custom-house, and conducted a hole-and-corner inquiry, upon which is founded a garbled and dishonest report—suppressing some part of the evidence and altering other parts, and manipulating witnesses in a way which would have disgraced a Tombs lawyer—all of which we will prove to the satisfaction of every reasonable man another day. This "Retrenchment Committee" furthermore made a most agreeable journey to California and other places at the public expense; it took the best rooms in the best hotels, and drank the best wines, and drove the best horses, and had a "good time" generally; and made the people pay the piper. It fitted up sumptuous quarters for itself in the Senate—spending a sum of money upon them, [illegible] of which ANDREW J. GARVEY, J. A. SMITH, and Mr. DONNARUMMA would have had no reason to be ashamed. In short, this wonderful Retrenchment Committee contrived to lavish money with both hands, and never saved the public a single cent—in that respect being an excellent satire upon itself.

Now it happened that Senator SCHURZ became more and more discontented with the President, for reasons which we will state some other time—and we promise to state them in such a way as that the facts cannot possibly be misunderstood—and it dawned upon his ingenuous mind that if he could get the Retrenchment Committee reappointed, and himself made Chairman of it—a position to which he would have been deemed entitled—it might be made a capital means of raking together mud and muck to fling at the Administration. For, as in the Custom-house "investigation," only such witnesses would be summoned as were known to be bitter enemies of the Administration. Men like HENRY S. OLCOTT and MUDGETT could be called in this State—and they would be asked to repeat what they had heard upon mere hearsay or conjecture. This course was actually taken in reference to the Custom-house, and Senator SCHURZ believed that if it were carried out on a wider field, the results would be very encouraging to the politicians who are anxious to run a candidate of their own next Fall. To place a man on a jury who is known to have taken an oath to find you guilty, no matter what the evidence may prove, is a well-known method of securing you a fair trial. And Senator SCHURZ, whom his colleague, FRANK BLAIR, has declared is resolved to "bring his Germans against GRANT" next year—would have been very much in the position of such a juryman toward Gen. GRANT.

But this is not all—indeed, it is not half the history of this curious little affair. The House passed a resolution referring to a committee of its own, all such matters as were to be referred to this famous Retrenchment Committee. Therefore, the Senate was not in a position to obtain a joint committee. Then what did Senators SHERMAN, CONKLING and others do? They proposed the appointment of a standing Senate Committee, to inquire into all alleged corruption and abuses—a committee which could at any time be ordered by resolution to make an investigation into any case where fraud was suspected or charged, no matter in what quarter it existed. This would have been an efficient, able and impartial committee, and therefore not by any means such a committee as FENTON, SCHURZ and TRUMBULL wanted. It would have been a committee not appointed in the interest of any party, or of any candidate for the Presidency, but in the interests of the people at large. Nothing of this kind suited the Fenton-Schurz faction. To summon just such witnesses as they pleased, and put them garble their evidence as they liked—as was done in the Custom-house Report—this was their sole object. The Senate Committee had all the power that was requisite to carry out an independent inquiry. The Senators who think that the government of this country is at least as safe in Gen. GRANT's hands as it would be in the hands of any of his opponents, spoke earnestly in favor of such a committee. They are pledged to the cause of Civil Service Reform. And yet the newspapers referred to allege that they are in a conspiracy to strangle that reform. This is as bad in its way as the long attempt to bolster up Mayor HALL, and of the Post to make out that NATHANIEL SANDS embodied in his own person all the cardinal virtues.

But it is further said that Senators SHERMAN and CONKLING opposed the Schurz-Trumbull scheme because they were afraid of having their own appointments to office (or rather their recommendations for appointments) scrutinized. We will sift that charge thoroughly very soon—there is no room to do it at the end of an article. Senators TRUMBULL and SCHURZ must not complain if their recommendations to office are carefully examined. These newspapers make so many unfounded allegations against other Senators that it is worth while to go carefully into the facts about all the Senators concerned. If the one does not speak in ignorance, for instance, about Senator CONKLING's appointments to the Custom-house under Mr. MURPHY's rule, it is guilty of a much worse offence. Senator CONKLING never made or recommended, directly or indirectly, by hint, letter, speech, nod or wink, a single recommendation of any person whatever to the Custom-house, a fact of which few people can be aware, considering the willful falsehoods uttered on the subject. Anybody would suppose that Mr. CONKLING had filled the Custom-house with his friends, instead of never having got a solitary human being a place in it, while Mr. MURPHY was Collector. But this is a sample of the malice with which every man is pursued who dares to avow his confidence in the Administration. We will give the whole facts on this subject, and defy anybody to disprove them; and then ask the public to form their own conclusion about the relative merits of Senators SCHURZ and SHERMAN, Senators FENTON and CONKLING, as Civil Service Reformers. We do not care to deal in arguments on such a subject, when unanswerable and overwhelming facts are accessible.

Tweed and Sniff.

If the indictment under which TWEED was arrested be the only one which Judge BEDFORD's Grand Jury intend bringing against TWEED, it has one very radical defect. It begins by reciting the clause of the act of 1870, under which the interim Board of Audit was authorized to pass upon certain outstanding claims. The words of the clause in question are as follows:

"All liabilities against the County of New-York incurred previous to the passage of said act shall be audited by the Mayor of New-York City, the Controller and the President of the Board of Supervisors of New-York County, and the amounts which shall be found to be due shall be provided for by the issue of revenue bonds of New-York County, payable during the year 1871."

The indictment proceeds to refer to the meeting of this Board, composed of HALL, CONNOLLY and TWEED, and quotes the resolution presented by Mayor HALL and passed unanimously, providing that the evidence of the claims in question should be "the authorization for the same by the said Board (of Supervisors) or its appropriate committees, on certificate of Clerk or President." The Legislature appointed these three men a Board of Audit, and the first thing they did was to decline to audit anything. They took a short and easy method of discriminating between claims "found to be due" and those which had no legal existence, and that was to leave the matter entirely in the hands of WM. M. TWEED, in his capacity as President of the old Board of Supervisors, and JAMES WATSON, the County Auditor. This resolution was equivalent to giving TWEED and WATSON letters of marque to pillage at their own sweet will. TWEED's "rake" amounted to at least a million of dollars, and it is for the recovery of this sum that the suit before Judge LEARNED has been instituted. The Grand Jury's indictment confines itself to two of the claims "audited" in this peculiar fashion, which TWEED was personally responsible for manufacturing out of a very few genuine items charged to the County by KEYSER & Co. The indictment confines itself, in fact, to the charge of fabricating certain documents for the purpose of corruptly acquiring money.

It will be noted that there is something of a hiatus here in the chain of accusation. TWEED was not only guilty of theft directly and personally, but he was also a party to the criminal neglect of duty which rendered possible this special felonious operation upon KEYSER's vouchers with which he stands charged. He was a member of a Board expressly created for purposes of audit—i. e.—as Mr. TILDEN puts it—"to hear, to judge, to determine whether the claim is valid—how much is properly and justly due upon it." He assisted in the fraudulent violation of that duty, and in making that Board the means of robbing the City out of six millions of dollars. For this offence it was as much within the province of the Grand Jury to indict him as for the further crime of putting his name on the back of a fictitious account. Have the District Attorney and the Grand Jury purposely neglected this feature of TWEED's case to avoid what it would have inevitably lead to—the conviction of HALL? If they have not, it may be well for them to remember that the criminal evasion of duty of all the members of the Board of Audit may be, without any stretch of justice, considered with special reference to HALL. The resolution which gave the lie to the act of the Legislature was of HALL's own proposal and drafting. If CONNOLLY and TWEED might seek shelter under the plea of being wrongly advised, HALL, as Mr. TILDEN has shown, could do no such thing. The people do not believe, and the Grand Jury ought not to presume, that any excuse can exonerate all three from being parties to a conspiracy to defraud the public. But if they must have a clearly-defined personal responsibility there need be no difficulty in selecting HALL as the "chief conspirator—the man who is responsible for the action of the Board, and the man whom the public ought to hold as accountable for the crime that followed afterward."

The President's Next Step Toward Reform.

The report of the Civil Service Commission, of which Mr. GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS is Chairman, is now complete, and will be sent to the President today. The two most salient propositions made by the Commissioners are for the prohibition of recommendations for appointment from members of Congress, and for the suppression of removals for political reasons. The report will be immediately sent to Congress, and that body will be asked by the President to take prompt action upon it. The unqualified indorsement of such a report by the President is a confirmation of his previous decided steps in the direction of civil service reform, and a refutation of the partisan charges of insincerity dinged into the ears of the public by his political opponents. For, notice what the propositions of the report imply. In the first place, the prohibition of recommendations for appointment from members of Congress throws on the President immediately and completely the responsibility for the appointments which he is required to make. In asking Congress to give effect to this prohibition, Gen. GRANT declares to the country that on the verge of a Presidential contest, in which he is accused of being willing to pervert his appointing power to secure his re-election, he is willing to assume absolute responsibility for the use of that power, and, if he be renominated, to stand or fall by the verdict of the people on his administration of it. He deliberately elects not to be judged by his conduct in the use of the old-fashioned modes of making appointments, and chooses to give the people a far more exacting standard by which to estimate him than has been applied to any President since WASHINGTON. In his last message, Gen. GRANT said of the first thirty-three months of his term: "If bad men have secured places it has been the fault of the system, established by law and custom, for making appointments, or the fault of those who recommend for Government positions persons not sufficiently known to them, or who give letters indorsing the characters of office-seekers without a proper sense of the grave responsibility which such a course devolves upon them." In approving the report we have foreshadowed, Gen. GRANT proposes to change the "system established by law and custom," and to dispense with all recommendations and letters of indorsement, assuming on his own shoulders the burden of selecting his subordinates. Is this the act of a tricky and insincere politician, or of an honest and courageous man?

In the next place, the report takes away from the President the power of removal for political reasons. In approving it he shows that he is willing not only to be judged by what he does for reform, but to be practically disarmed of the power of promoting selfish ends.

It will not detract from the force of this act, as an indication of the President's frank determination to assume the responsibility for reform, if he ask of Congress the establishment of a system of examinations which shall aid him in making good appointments, without admitting the corrupting influence of political "claims." It is not to be presumed that any system which the Executive can himself frame, however well it may answer under a single honest and earnest Administration, will have that permanence and thoroughness which can be given by law. This fact was very clearly stated by Senator EDMUNDS in introducing on the first day of the session the Jenckes Civil Service bill. It will unquestionably be the duty of Congress to at once aid President GRANT in the performance of the task he assumes, and to secure the lasting benefits of it to the country by the passage of this bill.

What the Mayor Has to Hedge.

Now that HALL has announced his intention of "casting his political skin," it is but just to remember that there were a good many solid reasons for keeping inside of this covering as long as he possibly could. Not to mention the exceeding gratification which such a man could derive from appearing on sale days, now in a green suit, then in a philibeg, and again in yachting costume, there were the obvious possibilities of neat operations of financial thimble-rigging like that of the Board of Audit; besides quiet chances of official plunder derived from the proceedings of the Board of Apportionment, or from the signing of fraudulent leases. But, in addition to all this, it must be borne in mind, that the Mayor's firm of BROWN, HALL & VANDERPOEL was allowed to grab, under strictly legal forms, some very fat pickings from the feast of plunder. In 1870, the emoluments of the members of the firm may be estimated as follows:

Mayor's salaries	$15,000
Sheriff's counsel (worth)	50,000
Vanderpoel received from City as assistant to Corporation Counsel, as the City accounts show	20,000
Vanderpoel as counsel to Police Board	7,500
Vanderpoel as counsel to Board of Health and costs on suits	15,000
Vanderpoel as attorney to Excise Board,	5,000
Vanderpoel as attorney to Board of Education	5,000
Vanderpoel as attorney to Commissioners of Charities and Correction	5,000
Vanderpoel in contests and muddles gotten up by Hall, such as the Foley and Bull and Aldermen ones	10,000
Erie Railroad retainers	25,000
All other business, costs and fees and counsel, as they were "in" with the Judges, (at least)	60,000
Total	$202,500

We believe that these figures are rather under than over the mark. If we have done this eminent legal firm any injustice in our estimate we shall be glad to make the necessary corrections. HALL was clearly entitled to the lion's share, or any seventy-five thousand dollars a year, out of this respectable income. This, be it noted, has been going on for years in a more or less modified shape. As District-Attorney, HALL had "peculiar" advantages for throwing business in the way of his partners. As Mayor, he had others of similar kind, and it is hardly to be wondered at that he has stood so long shivering at the prospect of emerging into an inhospitable world without the "political skin" which has answered his purpose so well. HALL, relying solely on his native and acquired abilities, would make but little headway either in Sing Sing or outside of it.

Reorganization of Tammany.

We understand that it is the design of the Democracy of this City to reorganize Tammany Hall. It is quite time, one would think, that it should be done. TWEED, the felon, is still Grand Sachem of the order, and most of the leading Sachems who have been wont to gather with him around the council fires of the wigwam have either been indicted for crime or are fugitives from justice. The proper thing for the Democracy to do, as it seems to us, would be not to attempt to reconstruct Tammany, but to let it pass quietly out of existence in the blaze of infamy that now surrounds it. No reorganization will ever be effectual to place Tammany Hall in good odor again in the community. The very name of Tammany will always, in future, be identified in the popular mind with fraud and corruption. Besides, the Society was always undemocratic in principle and most tyrannical in practice. It is a secret society, and its political power has been that of a plotting, wire-pulling oligarchy. For the last ten years a clique of four or five Sachems has dictated every nomination and every appointment to office in this City, while the rank and file of the Democratic Party have been driven up to the polls like a flock of sheep to ratify its decrees.

But, if the Democracy are bent upon reorganizing the Tammany machine, they ought to go back to the beginning and do the work thoroughly. The "Tammany Society, or Columbian Order," was organized originally as a benevolent society, and the success of divesting it from its original purpose into a political machine was a reward on its founders as well as upon the community. It was chartered by the Legislature, April 9, 1805. It has been conducted in open violation of its charter for nearly half a century and ought long since to have ceased to exist as a legal corporation. As long ago as 1853 Mr. G. ALTING, a member of the Assembly from this City, introduced into the Legislature the following resolution, which was not acted upon at the time, but which we hope to see revived at the forthcoming session:

Resolved, That a select committee of five be appointed for the purpose of investigating the affairs of the "Tammany Society, or Columbian Order," in the City of New-York, incorporated by an act passed April 9, 1805, for the purpose of affording relief to the indigent and distressed members of the said Association, their widows, orphans, and others who may be found proper objects of their charity, and especially to inquire what use has been made of the funds and property of said Society,—whether for charitable or merely political purposes,—and that said committee report the testimony taken by them, and whether, in their judgment, the charter of the said Society has been so far violated as to render its repeal expedient and proper; and that said committee have power to send for persons and papers.

Now that the Democracy propose to reorganize the Society, it is a fitting time for the Legislature to institute an examination into its affairs and see whether it has complied with its charter, or adhered to the object for which it was originally created. Let us know how much of the Tammany fund has been devoted to charity, and how much to politics; and also how much has found its way into the private pockets of the Sachems. It may turn out that the magnificent donation of fifty thousand dollars which Grand Sachem TWEED made to his Seventh Ward constituents last Winter did not come out of the Boss' pocket after all, but was abstracted from the treasury of the "Tammany Society, or Columbian Order."

Mr. O'Conor on Judge Barnard.

In the proceedings before Judge BARNARD, on Saturday, for the release of TWEED from the prison to which he would have been peremptorily consigned had he been a poor man, Mr. O'CONOR used the following language:

"And with great respect to your Honor, I apprehend that it would be a violation of all the decencies of an orderly and correct administration of justice, when regularly constituted Courts of justice, sitting for the administration of criminal law within your County, almost within reach of your Honor, had decreed this indictment, arraigned the prisoner, given him time to plead, and instead of their moving to quash the indictment, instead of their demurring to the indictment, instead of their raising any question as to the insufficiency in law of the indictment and of the charges it contains, that he should decline to plead, that he should decline to move for bail, that he should decline to quash the indictment, and while the prisoner is on his way to prison, rush across to your Honor and get a habeas corpus, which, of course, a Judge is bound to allow in any case, and notwithstanding that, that he alone sitting in Chambers should assume to determine summarily this great question, to anticipate the judgment of the Court and summarily determine it in favor of the accused."

Mr. O'CONOR then went on to say:

"The very fact stated by your Honor that you could not with propriety summarily determine to quash the indictment, would seem to involve, as a necessary consequence, that you could not give the prisoner the benefit that would result from the order of quashing. Your order will not turn aside the indictment, but it will give the accused all the advantages for the present that could result from your undertaking to quash the indictment."

If Mr. O'CONOR really believed that any consideration for the "decencies of an orderly and correct administration of justice" would restrain Judge BARNARD from giving TWEED "all the advantages" which that intimate and influential friend of the Court chose to ask for, he was doomed to disappointment. The Judge did not undertake to quash the indictment—he was not asked to. He was asked to give TWEED "all the advantages" that would result from that undertaking, and he did it. Mr. O'CONOR's condemnation of any such course was very scathing, but it was not too scathing to be just.

MINOR TOPICS.

Before the election, when JOHN J. BRADLEY wanted to prove himself to be "respectable," he published a card, claiming considerable credit for not stealing certain moneys which had, he said, been appropriated by one or more of his predecessors in the Chamberlain's office. Most people thought that this was rather a slender basis to build a reputation on, and BRADLEY was accordingly rejected by the Seventh Senatorial District. Controller GREEN has just reminded BRADLEY that his pretense of having anything whatever to do with the disposal of the accrued interest upon City funds is entirely without foundation. The practice of keeping separate accounts for the moneys deposited and the interest upon them is, in the words of the Controller, "without legal authority, and must cease." BRADLEY is further reminded that as Chamberlain, he is simply chief officer of one of the bureaus of the Controller's Department, and that all of his immediate subordinates are removable by the Controller. We shall, then, not have to wait even for the action of the Legislature to find a thorough purging of the pay-rolls of the Chamberlain's office.

The honest men of both parties in the next Legislature are committed in favor of the most stringent laws for the protection of the ballot-box against fraud, and no more important duty will devolve upon that body during the coming session than the framing of a registry and election law which shall effectually secure that result. It will be found by no means an easy task to devise laws that will afford absolute protection against fraud in a City like New-York, and our legislators will do well to consult a few practical City politicians who are thoroughly acquainted with the manner in which these frauds are perpetrated. A very ingenious device in the shape of a "registration roll-book" has been invented by Mr. J. WALTER STOOPS, of Brooklyn, which we understand has met the unqualified approval of such of our Senators and Assemblymen elect as have examined it. At the right of each name, as recorded upon the registration-book, is a coupon containing a number corresponding with the number on the left side of the page, and representing the numerical order in which the name is registered. This coupon is detached and given to the person registered, and is to be presented by him when he appears to deposit his ballot. The poll-clerk collates instantly the number, [illegible] of his card, corresponds with that given by the voter, and ballot is received. In case the voter loses the coupon, he will be required to swear in his vote; but should another man find it, he will be unable to vote upon it, for the reason that he will not be able to give the name to which it belongs.

It is about time that the "Central Albert Cardozo Democratic Club" issued another circular to the people, sounding the praises of its idol, "Boss" TWEED. The public are in danger of losing sight of the rare virtues of the "Boss" in the clamor that is being raised against him by his persecutors. It is only a little more than a month since the "Albert Cardozo Club" scattered broadcast over the City a circular, printed in English and German, from a copy of which, now lying before us, we extract the following touching tributes to the man who now appears to be so sadly unappreciated:

"On ordinary occasions it would not become this organization to commend to public approval the official action of Senator TWEED; but at this time, when the poisoned arrows of treacherous imitators are aimed at him, his friends should be found faithful among the faithless.

"We urge every man who has received benefits, direct or indirect, at the hands of WILLIAM M. TWEED, to vindicate him at the coming election. Let it not be said that any of his constituency were so ungrateful that they refused to stand by the man who, more than any other, changed the Empire State from Radical Republicanism to the Gibraltar of Democracy!"

If TWEED's trial should happen to come on before Judge CARDOZO, it ought to be sufficient for his counsel to read the above extracts to insure his prompt acquittal. ALBERT CARDOZO on the Bench would never "go back" on ALBERT CARDOZO in the Democratic Club.

The Sun continues to print the name of S. T. LAMBERT as a second cousin of the President, who, it alleges, holds the office of Receiver of Public Moneys in Oregon, and is a defaulter. He must man ever held office in Oregon. A man named LAMPMAN was appointed Receiver, on the recommendation of Mr. SUMNER, of Washington Territory, and, having deposited public money in a bank that was not a designated depository, he was removed by the President long before the Sun made the false discovery that any one responding him in name was a relative or held office in Oregon. The Sun's statement that the President's brother-in-law, Lieut.-Col. DENT, was promoted to the Colonelcy of an artillery regiment, in order to give him a place after the consolidation of his infantry regiment with another, is also false. In the consolidation of the army, he was transferred from a regiment of infantry to one of artillery, receiving no promotion whatever, but still ranking as Lieutenant-Colonel the same as before.

The World thinks that Mr. KELLEY, of Pennsylvania, is hypocritical in his professions of attachment to the working man, because he is a Pennsylvania Protectionist. Possibly, but how is it with RANDALL, of the same State, who refused the other day to vote for FERNANDO WOOD's buncombe free-trade resolutions, because they were "heresy in his State." Is not Mr. RANDALL a Democrat?

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NOTES.

The musical season this year has not only been unusually brilliant, but exceptionally protracted. The twenty-fourth regular evening representation of Italian Opera takes place to-night at the Academy, and the performances we learn, will extend over this and next week. This evening "Il Trovatore" will be sung, and to-morrow, "Faust" will be given. The success of these exceedingly fashionable entertainments does not seem to interfere with the popularity of the concert-room. Last week Mr. DOLBY's artistic attracted appreciative audiences to Steinway Hall, and on Saturday evening Miss ANTOINETTE STERLING gave a concert at the same place. On Christmas night Miss KELLOGG and the New-York Mendelssohn Union will inaugurate "The Messiah," and until further notice subscribers to musical entertainments will occur almost nightly. Miss STERLING's concert was given with the co-operation of Messrs. DAHMEN, MILLS, MAENNA, SCHNEIDER and CARPENTER, and a vocal quartet. The lady sang songs by SCHUBERT, SCHUMANN, MENDELSSOHN and GOW, and the tenor sang and recited from ROSSINI's "L'Italiana in Algieri."... A vocal and instrumental concert will be given at Steinway Hall, this evening, in aid of the destitute women and children of Cuba. An entertainment in behalf of Miss JESSIE N. BELL's educational schools for the poor white people on the sea-board of North Carolina, will be held at the Conservatory of Music, No. 311 Fourth-avenue, this evening. There will also take place a concert at the Fifth-avenue Baptist Church, in which Misses BEEBE and PALMER, and Messrs. FRITSCH and BROCKETT are to be concerned.... There is no occasion to speak at length of the Sunday concerts at the Grand Opera-house. They are given with unswerving regularity, and can be commended without reserve to the admirers of instrumental music played by a capital band. If the manager of these affairs would but increase the number and quality of the vocal solos supplied, he would not, in our opinion, have occasion to regret his liberality. On the other hand, the present programmes are applauded by very large assemblages, and we are willing to say that the prospects are that in a few months hence, the recitals by the musicians of the Ninth will be so satisfying, that we need not look to Europe for more effective or finished work.

Dramatic.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NOTES.

The reproduction of "The Black Crook" at NIBLO's, this evening, will be the theatrical event of the week. A dress rehearsal, which was commenced toward midnight on Saturday and ended on Sunday morning, disclosed to a privileged audience much new scenery, many new dresses, and several novel scenic effects. Of the general impression caused by the public exposition of the beauties of the rejuvenated play, we shall, however, be better able to speak to-morrow. That the second revival of "The Black Crook" will be successful is hardly to be doubted. The first was very well received. Long "runs," indeed, appear suited to repetition. "Humpty Dumpty," now at the outset of its second career, is reaping a golden harvest for the management of the Olympic. The audiences, during the past three months, have caused the nightly receipts to amount to almost $20,000. The change of bill at the Grand Opera-house will place before the footlights the drama of "Charles O'Malley," which has already been acted at the same establishment. At Wood's Museum, "The Ticket-of-Leave Man" will be the play at the evening performances, and "Satan in Paris" at the matinées, that of Saturday excepted.

Miscellaneous.

CHARITABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

An allegorical spectacle called "The Great Republic," and consisting, according to the bills, of declamations, music, songs and tableaux, will be offered at the Academy of Music on Wednesday and Friday evenings, and on Saturday afternoon, for the benefit of the "House for the Friendless" and the "Howard Mission." The performances are to be under direction of Prof. J. M. HAGER.

CIRCUSES AND SHOWS.

Mr. J. M. NIXON's Southern Circus, situated in Broadway, opposite the New-York Hotel, will be opened to the public to-night. At the New-York Circus [illegible], of Miss LOUELLE WATSON, and of Messrs. FOSS and DUTTON, can now be witnessed. At Mr. P. T. BARNUM's Museum, Menagerie and Circus can still be visited at the Rink.

CUBA.

Expression of the Recent Troubles—A Lawless Land—Effect of the President's Message—General Gloomy.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Dec. 9, 1871.

The impression caused by the recent events remains without any apparent decrease, and many proofs of this fact can be seen everywhere—in private life, on the streets and among all classes of business men. The amount of money which has been and is being sent out of the country—the senders being principally Spaniards—is perfectly astounding. No less than $6,500,000 have gone out of the country from week only, and the sales of exchange made to private individuals during the present week reach a million of dollars. Exchange on England, which, previous to the execution of the students and occurrence of the riots, stood at 20%, and which was on the decline, owing to the approach of the sugar crop, and in its natural movement ought to be today at from 15 to 16 per cent, premium, sells now at 32 per cent. premium, and every dollar offered finds a ready purchaser. The feeling of disgust among the better classes of Spaniards is stronger than before, and they do not like to speak about the riot.

NO AMERICANS MOLESTED.

The scenes during the riot, the entire hostility toward the authorities and the utter disregard of military obedience or discipline were disgraceful enough, but the rumors spread and published in some journals, asserting that Americans had been insulted or threatened, are false in every particular. No American was molested in the slightest degree, and the fury of the Volunteer mob was solely directed against the young students and the higher Spanish officials. The Governor and the acting Captain-General were in more danger than any foreigner; if the Volunteers had got been satisfied, then something might have happened; but as this is a mere supposition the fact remains that no American was threatened or ill treated. The truth about the riot is bad enough without falsehood.

A LAWLESS LAND.

Not even in the so-called "Codigo de Siete Partidas," or laws issued and compiled during the twelfth century, can any be found which would have sentenced the young students to death. And this reminds me to state that even in ordinary times no certain and fixed laws exist in the Island of Cuba. The Judges use their discretion or fancy in convicting, by citing the ancient "Codigo," which is no longer observed in Spain, and could not to be observed here; the so-called laws of the Indies are also obsolete. The new law of Spain, called the "Codigo Penal," and according to which Spaniards are tried in Spain, has no power here, although Judges quote it and generally act upon it. That is to say, they do so if their rectitude or caprice demands of them to apply these laws, as it is simply a matter of taste and not an obligation. When it is once decided whether Cuba is a Spanish province, a Spanish colony, a conquered country, or anything else that may be decided under Spanish supremacy, then the island may receive the benefit of uniform laws, although Cuba can never have the same laws as Spain while slavery exists.

EFFECT OF CIVIL'S MESSAGE.

The President's Message relating to Cuba has been published in the garbled form permitted by the authorities. Much word about the slavery question, has been suppressed in the despatch, and this not only owing to the reason that the Censor would not permit it, but also because they would not dare to refer to this hideous subject. No matter what President GRANT may do or say on this subject, no chance will be made here, and slavery will continue to exist, unless the Cuban Government (i. e., the Madrid one) be forced to make the requisite changes in the condition of the slave. The Madrid Government would be powerless to enforce them. What has been done amounts to nothing, and, as Aunt Partington once observed of a colored man in Boston, "They treat him just as if he was a nigger." That portion of the message recommending Congress to pass a law withdrawing the protection of the Government, and prohibiting American citizens from owning or trafficking in slaves, has been the first and only effective blow yet given to slavery. Go wherever you will on the Island of Cuba, visit the towns or the plantations, and Americans will be found side by side with the largest planters in the island are owned by Americans, who reside in the United States. A Boston house owns three, a New-York house five, and a Philadelphia house four big plantations. If the names of some of these slave owners were published what a cry would be raised in the upper wards, and if the State Department would make but the slightest inquiries they it would be astonished on seeing certain names as those of slave-owners. The answers would be worth reading, but it would be necessary to register a Spanish accumulation and not receive the information through the regular channels.

THE CITY GOVERNOR.

The new Governor of Havana, Judge HORRUTINER, has assumed his post. He is well spoken of everywhere, having resided here for eighteen years, acting as Judge of the Common and Superior Courts. What he will do as Governor, and how he will act, can only be told after he has held the position for a while. Ex-Governor ROMERO leaves on the 16th, and I have it from good authority that after his arrival in Madrid he will publish a pamphlet explaining many things which are as yet a secret to the public. If he only tells half of what he knows, and about one-fourth of the affairs he has had a hand in, the Spanish and Cuban parties will have subjects to discuss until the day of judgment.

THE STRUGGLE.

Gen. VALMASEDA appears to be making preparations to leave for the field again about the 1st of January or immediately after Christmas. As soon as he leaves we may expect a row, such things having happened every time after he went away from Havana. War-news is meagre; the cholera and yellow fever are still making and havoc among the troops, but have decreased considerably within the past fortnight, and are still decreasing. Skirmishes all over the Eastern, and many portions of the Central Department are of daily occurrence. The surrender of Col. URQUIZA, the successor of Gen. PAMPO VEGA, with his command, has freed the Spaniards from a very troublesome enemy. Another party of Cubans surrendered near Moron, among them several officers. The Diario says that Gen. MATEO CAMANOVA had asked permission to surrender, but that the Spanish commander had refused to accept his offer.

MISCELLANEOUS GOSSIP.

Gen. Asensio TORRENTE, the new United States Consul, has arrived here and taken charge of the office. Judging from the reports which have preceded him, he is a very fit man for the position. Several cases of yellow fever have occurred among recent arrivals, who have carelessly set the laws of the climate at defiance.

QUASIMODO.

New-York City Mission.

The New-York City Mission held their forty-fifth anniversary at the Presbyterian Church, Fifth-avenue, last night. The principal speakers were Rev. Dr. HALL, Rev. H. D. GAMES and Mr. WETMORE, the President of the Society. Several of the City missionaries made brief statements of the operations and results of the past year, from which it was shown that the year 1871 had been the most successful in the history of the institution. Among the results of the year's labor were the following interesting items: 1,869 children induced to join the Sabbath-schools, 12,000 persons persuaded to attend churches and missions, 2,049 temperance pledges, 1,923 families and 6,000 persons aided, and $6,000 contributions given, besides clothing, fuel, food and medicine. The receipts and expenditure for the past year were $20,258. It is being the custom to spend every year without any surplus fun

OUR STATE INSTITUTIONS.—XI.

The Albany Penitentiary.

ALBANY, Thursday, Dec. 7, 1871.

The great Penitentiary at Pentonville, London, is commonly called the model prison. Whether its management entitles it to that distinction, or whether the name is derived from some peculiarly model system of carrying out imprisonment inaugurated at the time of its construction, I do not know. But here, in Albany, the Penitentiary, though not called the "model prison," is invariably adduced as an example of a model prison whenever such institutions are the subject of discussion. I spent nine whole of this morning in inspecting it and its inmates, and in studying its arrangements for the confinement and reformation of criminals and the means by which it was made more than self-supporting. I could come to but one conclusion, that it deserves all the encomiums which the citizens of Albany feel pleased and proud to pass upon it. Its inmates are very carefully guarded. They have as much good plain prison fare as they desire or ask for, secular and religious instruction, clean cells, bedding, and eating utensils, plenty of occupation, and kind and considerate treatment from Gen. PILSBURY, the Superintendent, and his subordinate officers. The discipline is strictly but mercifully enforced. The hours of labor, considering the nature of that labor, are not severe—ten hours in Summer and eight hours in Winter. No specified task is imposed, but the overseers in all the work-shops insist that each prisoner shall work to the best of his ability; and they see that he does so. If he is refractory, they report him to the Superintendent, at whose discretion he is subjected to the only punishment for breaches of discipline inflicted in the prison—confinement in the "solitary cell." The labor which the prisoners are compelled to perform produces just that amount of healthy fatigue which gives them a night's sound sleep, and so lessens the weariesomeness of the many hours which they must necessarily pass in their cells.

Speaking of this prison-labor system, in his last official report to the Inspectors of the Penitentiary, Gen. PILSBURY says: "The most prolific parent of crime is idleness, for which the best remedy is a careful training in habits of industry. The work-shops in the Penitentiary are an important means of reform for criminals. The man who for a term of years is shut away from all vicious indulgences, rises early and retires early, is regularly at the sun, and labors from eight to ten hours daily, cannot fail to be improved, unless he is utterly incorrigible. And we have reason to know that, not unfrequently, those who have gone through this process, or distasteful to them at first, but so beneficial in the end, have been redeemed from idleness and drunkenness and criminality, and become useful and respectable and respected citizens. The habits of early rising, temperance and steady industry once formed here, when carried into life elsewhere, are so many guarantees of honest purposes and safeguards against relapse into crime."

So says Gen. PILSBURY. Now let us see what the prisoners themselves have to say about the matter. I had a long talk on this subject of prison labor with one of the convicts—CHAS. PURDUE, the sailor, who, about a year ago, was condemned to death for attempted arson at sea, and was to have been executed in May last, but whose punishment was commuted by the President to twelve years' imprisonment. From the time of his arrest to his removal to Albany, after the consummation of his sentence, PURDUE was confined in the notorious Ludlow-street Jail in New-York. For many months he had the run of the prison from 8 o'clock in the morning till 6 in the evening. His quiet, inoffensive manners and marked intelligence made him a general favorite with his fellow-prisoners and the keepers of the jail, who helped him to many little comforts and showed him much kindness. He could walk about the jail, chat with one or another, read, draw, (an accomplishment with him,) smoke, play billiards, and see his friends whenever they chose to call upon him. With the exception of a very poor diet, he had every thing he wanted but liberty and occupation. I questioned him as to which life he preferred, Ludlow-street or the Penitentiary?

"You see, Sir," he said, "I am occupied all day here. The days ain't half so long, and the nights I don't know much about; besides, I take a kind of interest in noting the improvement I make in my work. I work on a sewing machine of ladies' boots. The food's better here and more of it; more variety."

I asked him whether he would return to his idle life and greater liberty at Ludlow-street Jail if he had the choice.

"Not I, Sir," he replied with a cheerful smile. "Why should I? My twelve years here would be twenty-four there. You don't know what it is to be locked up month after month with nothing whatever to do. It is dreadful dull."

Can there be a stronger argument than that few simple words of this poor prisoner in favor of compelling prisoners to work during the period of their incarceration. Labor is money to the prisoner, and, under the able management of the Albany Penitentiary, prevents him from being a burden to his fellow-citizens. It seems to me that prison labor is an abstract principal of real philanthropy, irrespective of the merits or demerits of the "contract system" or the controversy between prison authorities and the trades-unions about the sales of the product of prison labor.

"Make men diligent, and they will be honest," said JOHN HOWARD. "Where is the man bold enough to gainsay or plain a truth?

The Albany Penitentiary is a substantial building of the castellated order of architecture, (though not very exact in its details,) located beyond the new City Park, about a mile from the capitol. We are told that "the way of the transgressor is hard." The way to the Albany Penitentiary certainly is, as any one of its visitors who has struggled up the mile and a half of steep ascline, which must be traveled before reaching it on a hot Summer's day, or in a stinging cold snap, can honestly testify. The Penitentiary stands on the high ground west of the city, has a commanding view of the surrounding country and the Hudson River, and boasts a private domain of fifteen acres of undulating grass land. It was built in 1845-46, under the superintendence of a Committee appointed by the State Legislature, and has always been, with two slight intermissions, under the government and superintendence of Gen. AMOS PILSBURY. The General will, I trust, pardon me for calling him a "regular jail bird" though he is a specimen of that rare species—the jail bird of freedom. He has lived in a jail all his life, but has always known the supreme luxury of walking in and out of it whenever it pleased him to do so. He commenced his career as a prison officer, at the age of nineteen, in the year 1824, as Deputy Warden of the New-Hampshire State Prison, of which his father, MOSES C. PILSBURY, had long been Warden. In 1837, the two PILSBURYS took charge of the State Prison at Wethersfield, Conn. Three years afterward AMOS PILSBURY succeeded his father as Warden at Wethersfield, and retained that position till 1[illegible], when his appointment at Albany in 1846. After the lapse of almost twenty years, the tall, stalwart Dutch blood in Albany still swears by AMOS PILSBURY as a prison manager.

The Penitentiary, since its enlargement, has accommodation for six hundred prisoners. The cells are 7 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 7 feet high, and have open-work doors. Each block of cells is surrounded by a lofty and spacious corridor. At night the gas from the corridors affords sufficient light to enable the prisoners to read by sitting near the door on the foot of the bed, and, as the gas is kept burning in Winter till 7½ o'clock, the prisoners have at least two hours for reading. At present there are only about five hundred prisoners, of which number seventy are females. Among them are prisoners from the Washington, D. C., Courts, prisoners condemned by Army Courts-martial, prisoners convicted before the United States Court in this State, and prisoners convicted in United States Courts in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and in other States where the Federal Government deems it unwise or insecure to incarcerate United States prisoners. The Superintendent, Deputy Superintendent, six overseers or assistant keepers, six watchmen and four matrons are sufficient to guard and control this large number of criminals, aided by that great and useful jailer—labor. Armed sentinels are stationed in watch-towers built in each corner of the quadrangle, for the purpose of preventing the escape of the prisoners, which can only be effected from the prison-yard. The almost certainty of being shot down apparently effectually represses any attempt; for only one man has succeeded in getting away from the Penitentiary since it was first occupied.

Only two branches of industry are carried on in this institution—shoe-making and chair-seating in cane. All the work is done under contract; the chair-seating for a factory at Troy; the shoe-making for the East New-York Shoe Manufacturing Company. With the exception of the women occupied in the chair-shop, and of those employed in making and repairing clothing, cooking, baking, washing and ironing, and in the necessary work about the buildings and grounds, all the able-bodied prisoners are engaged in the shoe-shops. There are three of these shoe-shops—70 prisoners in the first, 128 in the second, and 149 in the third—and all of them apparently working as steadily as though they were earning a good day's wages. Instructors go about from one prisoner to another, and explain the details of their work to those who are unskilled. An overseer sits at an elevated desk, from which he commands a view of every prisoner. His sole duty is to preserve order and see that the prisoners do not shirk their work. Silence is the order of the day, rendering the sound of the hammering, and the noise of the machinery, and the buzzing of the shafting, more obtrusive on the ear than it generally is in workshops. At one of the benches I saw CHADWICK, the notorious bond forger, performing, perhaps, for the first time in his life honest labor. In another shop were eight Ku-klux prisoners from Raleigh, N. C., pegging away at boots and shoes in the place of colored men and their sympathizers, only two or three of their number can read or write, though one, the son of a Presbyterian clergyman, is a highly educated man, and was the editor of a newspaper. In walking through the work-shops it is impossible to avoid remarking the very low type of physiognomy of the majority of the prisoners. Many of them are ugly and brutal-looking to a degree. The word thief is written on their countenance. If their mothers were good-looking, one is constrained to apply to them the celebrated bon-mot of TALLEYRAND to "Assassin" SMITH, the brother of SYDNEY SMITH, when he was boasting of the beauty of his mother: "C'était votre père, donc, qui s'était pas si beau." There are several very ingenious machines, provided by the contractors, in use in these shoe shops. Perhaps, the most interesting and at the same time the most complicated one is that which pegs the soles of the boots. This machine is fed by a roll of thinly-shaved wood, the width of the peg, similar in appearance to the rolls of narrow paper which feed automatic telegraphic instruments, the only difference being that the rolls of wood are placed in a longitudinal instead of a perpendicular position. The boot is placed on an iron last, sole uppermost, immediately under the machine. When the machinery is set in motion a small knife cuts a peg off the ribbon of wood. This peg is caught in a forceps at the same moment that an awl punctures the leather. Instantaneously a small hammer drives the peg into the hole which the awl has just left. To the uninitiated the apparent action of the pegging machinery is somewhat similar to that of the sewing-machine. It takes about twenty seconds to peg a boot. A machine of the same description also pegs boots with brass nails cut from a roll of wire, the twist of which holds them firmly in the leather.

But Gen. PILSBURY, while regarding the workshops as one great element of reforming criminals, does not lose sight of other and very valuable accessories to their reformation. There is the chapel, where divine service is regularly held, and the library, from which the prisoners can borrow not only instructive but entertaining works. In addition to the regular chapel services the prison chaplain visits every prisoner in his cell at regular intervals, and all the inmates of the Penitentiary are provided with Bibles by the Albany County Bible Society. The prison library contains nearly 1,400 volumes. Books of a religious tone and character predominate; but there are plenty of historical, biographical and scientific works in the catalogue, as well as others of a generally entertaining description. On two nights of the week school is kept for those who are desirous of attending it; and Gen. PILSBURY very judiciously restricts the schooling to two hours. He thinks that the prisoners are not capable of receiving instruction for more than two hours at a time after eight or ten hours' continuous labor in the work-shops. There are thousands of practical thinkers in New-York City who would like to see a similar spirit of consideration introduced into our common school system.

In the main part of the building a light staircase leads to the prison hospital, a large, airy, well-ventilated building, capable of accommodating fifty or sixty patients. When I was there this morning there were only three patients in bed and three or four seated on chairs or walking about the room. Seated at a desk, at one end of the room, I saw a tall, well-looking man, with dark hair, of respectable appearance. I concluded he was the physician in charge, and was somewhat taken aback on being informed that he was Major HODGE, the man who had lately robbed the United States Treasury of half a million of dollars. Major HODGE is a highly educated man. He graduated first in his class at Princeton College. While I was thoughtfully considering the downfall of this unfortunate victim of the love of money, a man of about fifty years of age, whom I had not previously noticed, passed me with a nervous shuffling gait, and went steadily on round the room, apparently taking no notice of anybody or anything. "That poor fellow," said Mr. PILSBURY, the General's son and deputy, "is a German, who was sent up here for counterfeiting. We were afraid at one time that he had softening of the brain, for he could not understand a question; at least he could not reply intelligibly to it. At one time he could not even speak intelligibly; but, as you see, he is now much better, though his mind is still clouded. He walks round the hospital ward from morning to night, and is under the impression that he is walking home to his native place, Hamburg. He will sometimes start off at a more rapid pace and, gravely inform us that he expects to reach home in the course of a few days." Poor fellow! He stepped in his endless perambulation to tell me that he had had beefsteak, potatoes, bread and butter and coffee for breakfast. This was true. Gen. PILSBURY feeds his prisoners on a generous diet when they are in the hospital. The health of the prisoners may be fairly estimated from the small number in the hospital, and the fact that there has been only one death in the prison during the last ten months.

The fare provided for the prisoners is very plain, but of good quality. No stint is put upon the prisoners as to quantity—the authorities making every allowance for difference of appetite. Any great big, hungry fellow may receive double rations (and many of them do so) on application to Gen. PILSBURY or his deputy; but if it is found that he wastes his extra ration the privilege is forfeited. This is but right. Prisoners who behave themselves well are allowed to receive presents of cooked eatables (no liquor is allowed) from their friends, and many a poor fellow has got the remains of a turkey or a half-eaten knuckle of ham carefully stowed away in a deal-box on the shelf in his cell. Speaking of the cells, the prisoners are encouraged in making them as neat and comfortable as the circumstances will permit. Many of the cells are carpeted, and the beds provided with nice coverlets and sheets. It is not uncommon to see a miniature bureau and wash-stand, a kerosene lamp, two or three simple pictures or engravings, or a dozen or so highly-prized volumes on a tiny book-shelf. This is Gen. PILSBURY'S system of discipline—a mixture of unrelenting strictness and winning kindness. He goes through the cells, talks to the prisoners as a friend, sternly points out to them the errors which have brought them under his care, advises with them, and encourages them as to the future. What is the consequence? A large majority of the prisoners respect the old man for the strictness and impartiality with which he fulfills his duties, and love and honor him for seizing on every opportunity to show them some little kindness and lead them to value the prospect of again becoming honest and reputable citizens. The records of the prison contain innumerable letters from former prisoners, often written one, two, or three years after they have left Albany, thanking Gen. PILSBURY for his kindness and good counsel, and assuring him of their continuance in well-doing. And all this discipline is sustained without resort to those cruel accessories of intimidation to offenders against the rules—the "cruncifix," the "iron collar," the "yoke and buck," or the diabolical "pulley." The only punishment that is administered to refractory prisoners is solitary confinement in the dark cell. That is severe enough in all conscience, and is always remitted on the promise of obedience and good behavior.

One, I think I may say, startling feature of this Albany Penitentiary is that it is not only self-sustaining, but earns annually a large surplus by the sale of the labor of its prisoners. This is so unusual a result that I propose to burden the end of my letter with some financial statistics.

The following table compares the pecuniary results of the Penitentiary for the year 1870 with those of other prisons in the State:

Prisons.	Number of Prisoners.	Income.	Expenditure.	Average Income per Prisoner.	Average Expenditure per Prisoner.	Income over Expenditure.	Expenditure over Income.
Albany.....	482	$82,263 17	$61,120 92	$170 73	$126 80	$21,139 25

Blackwell's Island.....	[illegible]	Not rep'd.	$[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

These figures show that whereas the other great prisons in the State entail a heavy tax on the resources of the State Treasury, the Albany Penitentiary was the only one last year, the forced labor of whose inmates was productive of a surplus of earnings over expenditure.

But lest it may be thought that the year 1870 was an exceptional one for the Albany Penitentiary, I append another table which furnishes statistics of the annual profit and loss since the opening of the prison:

Year.	Number of Prisoners.	Income.	Expenditure.	Income over Expenditure.	Expenditure over Income.

* This loss was exceptional. It was a year of panic, and none would contract to buy the prison labor.

This is a wonderful financial exhibit for a prison. In twenty-two years the prison has earned a total surplus of $158,413 94. Of this sum $50,000 has been expended in improvements and additions to the prison, and $50,000 has been paid into the State Treasury by Gen. PILSBURY, leaving $18,413 94 for capital to carry on the business of the prison and for provision against contingencies. With so pleasing an array of figures before them—in such marked contrast with the balance-sheets of other prisons—it is not surprising that the citizens of Albany always speak of the Penitentiary as their model prison.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE PRESS.

The Manners of the Sun.

From the Newberry (S. C.) Journal.

President GRANT has met with the same fate which has fallen every man who has been called to the Presidential chair. His private character and personal motives have been assailed with virulence, but with no more than has followed WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, ADAMS, JACKSON, VAN BUREN, LINCOLN—to be more exact, every President. The New-York TIMES has taken the trouble to step out of its way to editorially follow up and expose some of the accusations against the President. Its exposé is long, but it ought to have been made much longer to the greater discomfiture of those who coin, multiply and circulate slanders against the President. Such it is sufficient to thoroughly expose the real character of all the charges, grave or frivolous, which have been made against GRANT, and we therefore copy it below, that our readers may see how puerile and contemptible is the warfare to which the President's great merits have reduced his enemies.

Saratogian, Saratoga, N. Y.

The New-York TIMES, in answer to the charges against the President, gathered mostly from the columns of the Sun, and grouped in an editorial indictment in the Brooklyn Eagle, takes up each individual specification, and in every instance refutes it in a manner that will satisfy every unbiased mind.

Fall River (Mass.) News.

Lying about the Presidential candidates, the successful Presidents, the heads of Departments and others, has become a national vice, and what is worst of all, men who ought to frown down such security, will aid in floating said lies all over the land. In this particular no man has been more outrageously insulted than President GRANT. He has been charged with violating every idea of decency in accepting bribes or presents, in appointing relatives to office, and in shielding parasites who are depleting the Treasury. So persistently have these charges been reiterated, and almost bawled into the ears of the public, that the New-York TIMES has taken the trouble to investigate them, and see how much truth could be extracted from the mass. * * * So we can see the amount of wholesale lying that has been spread all over the country about GRANT. It is a vice of which every journal should be ashamed, and the name would in [illegible] The President were a Democrat and [illegible] Indeed, JEFF. DAVIS should [illegible] Mississippi itself. The New-York [illegible] has been doing a simple act of justice [illegible]igating the charges brought against [illegible]RANT and exposing the falsehood of many which were gaining the public ear, because the President could not with propriety take notice of them. The TIMES, without any party bias, has taken pains to ascertain the truth, and [illegible] to silence these calumniators, who were [illegible] more bold in their shameless abuse because they knew that the President would [illegible] reply.

Hartford (Conn.) Courant.

The New-York [illegible] and other papers have from time to [illegible] published extremely malicious and slanderous [illegible] with regard to President GRANT, and the [illegible]nce of his dignified silence here [illegible] as an admission of the truth of their [illegible]. Accordingly the New-York TIMES has been investigating the principal stories and given the result of careful inquisition. * * * Its facts furnish an utter refutation of the charges of the [illegible]rnals we have alluded to.

Buffalo Express.

Thousands have been made to believe that the President is a [illegible]; that he has acquired has millions by [illegible] acceptances of gifts from office-seekers and political speculators, and that the public offices have been filled to a scandalous extent by appointment of his relatives and family connections. The actual facts upon these [illegible] points have been carefully searched out by the TIMES, and its statements, which are [illegible] upon correct information, ought to put the President's calumniators to silence; but, of course, they will invent new slanders as fast as the old ones are crushed, and be as noisy and impertinent as ever.

Titusville (Penn.) Herald.

People who have been humbugged by the stories of GRANT'S [illegible] all his relations in office, accepting [illegible] from office-seekers, reveling in [illegible] and prostituting his position to selfish purposes, will now read the other side as presented by the NEW-YORK TIMES; in an article which we publish on our first page this morning. An elaborate [illegible] by the NEW-YORK TIMES to the Sun, World and other detamers of President GRANT, is printed in the third page of this paper. Rochester (Wis.) Sentinel.

None of the charges urged in the Sun are original with that sheet, but emanated from the "immaculate" World and Sun, of its adjacent City. The TIMES takes the pains to make the reply thus invited. It is a complete refutation, substantiated by incontestable proof, of all the charged [illegible]mony on the part of the President. When the people speak as solidly as they did last October and November, of course the TIMES' article is not needed, but it comes in very timely to [illegible] GRANT'S honesty and fitness for his place. But since this editorial vindication is made, we commend it to the reading of that doubting partisans there may be.

The New-York [illegible] has made a specialty of the President's relations, and had figured that a great many of [illegible] were in office. The Sun's paragraphs on the [illegible] have been quoted as facts by the Democratic papers of the country, and have been the foundation for nearly all of the opposition articles. The NEW-YORK TIMES analyzed these statements recently and left the originators in much the same condition that TWEED and [illegible] themselves after the onslaught of the TIMES on the Ring. Opponents who can [illegible] upon correct information, count to put the President's calumniators to silence; but, of course, they will invent new slanders as fast as the old ones are crushed, and be as noisy and impertinent as ever.

But since this editorial vindication is made, we commend it to the reading of that doubting partisans there may be.

From the Toledo Blade.

The New-York [illegible] has made a specialty of the President's relations, and had figured that a great many of [illegible] were in office. The Sun's paragraphs on the [illegible] have been quoted as facts by the Democratic papers of the country, and have been the foundation for nearly all of the opposition articles. The NEW-YORK TIMES analyzed these statements recently and left the originators in much the same condition that TWEED and [illegible] themselves after the onslaught of the TIMES on the Ring. Opponents who can [illegible] upon correct information, count to put the President's calumniators to silence; but, of course, they will invent new slanders as fast as the old ones are crushed, and be as noisy and impertinent as ever.

Holiday Presents.

Regardless of cost or value, at the Great Original Dollar Store, No. 697 Broadway, opposite Bond-street. Thousands and thousands of articles are daily disposed of at this [illegible] establishment for $1 that cannot be purchased elsewhere for less than $2. Their mammoth stock in the [illegible] variety surpasses any exhibition of goods that has ever been placed before the American people. The excitement of the purchasers and the [illegible] results the establishment are most wonderful. The proprietors have decided to open their institution at 7 A. M. and remain open until 10½ P. M., until further notice. Over one hundred sales-ladies have been employed to assist in exhibiting, disposing of, and wrapping the various articles, which consist in part of [illegible] assortment of the most elegant Books, [illegible] range of Toys, Melodeons, Concertinas, Accordions, [illegible]-octave Pianos, Work-boxes, Bureaus, Mirrors, [illegible], Tool-chests, Black-walnut Hat and Coat [illegible], Wardrobes, and a splendid assortment of Children's [illegible], Muffs, Collars and Boas. There will be sold at this [illegible] Grand Sets of China, three pieces each. Each of the variety.

The Milton Gold Jewelry Department, which occupies a prominent part in the Dollar Store, contains without doubt, the largest variety and most extensive assortment of the latest styles of Jewelry that there is in the City. There are Ladies' Opera-chains, set with pearls, rubies and garnets; there are Gent's curb, square, link and machine Chains; full sets of the finest and richest styles of Jewelry, Bracelets, Necklaces, Sleeve-buttons, Rings, Pencils, Armlets, shirt-studs, set with various kinds of precious stones, in fact there is nothing in the jewelry line that cannot be found in the assortment of the Dollar Store.

The Milton Gold Jewelry is guaranteed by the proprietors of the Dollar Store to always retain its color and brilliancy. They say it will stand the test of acids, and that even the most expert jewelers of New-York cannot detect any difference between the Milton Gold Jewelry and jewelers' gold. The proprietors of the Dollar Store are the sole agents in the United States for this Jewelry. They receive it direct from England, where it is manufactured, and has been worn for years, and sold by many of the leading jewelers of London for pure gold on account of its close resemblance. There seems to be a great demand for these goods, which we believe will give satisfaction. It will be advisable for those who desire to avoid the jam to call between 8 and 11 A. M., or after 6 P. M.—Advertisement.

BUSINESS OF THE PAST WEEK.

For the week ending with Saturday, Dec. 16, a larger number of public sales have taken place than usual at this season of the year and the market although dull, may perhaps be said to have been a trifle more active. No general activity can, however, be expected until after the Holidays, when, if the predictions of those CONVERSANT WITH REAL ESTATE matters may be trusted, a large amount of business will be transacted. The total value of City real estate sold at the Exchange during the past week was $109,300, as against the sum of $89,725, the figures for the week previous ending with Saturday, Dec. 9. In the matter of private sales but few have been recently reported. Such, however, have mostly been brought to our notice and have been given in detail. Wherever correction is made to the list of transfers below, in Westchester County real estate, Messrs. RIDER & CONKLIN, of Mott Haven, report having recently sold to Mr. T. H. FARRELL, for proposed factory uses, eight lots of land at Mott Haven, located near the Harlem Railroad depot, and running from the railroad to the canal docks, built by the firm, for $36,250—a good price.

SALES FOR THE PRESENT WEEK.

For the present week the following are the only sales thus far projected:

Today, Monday, Dec. 18, MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at the Exchange, will dispose of the lease of two lots, together with the two two-story and basement brick front houses thereon, situate on the north side of Charlton-street, between Hudson and Varick streets, Nos. 69 and 71; lease from Trinity Church two years from May 1, 1872; ground rent $400 each lot, payable quarterly; lots each 25 by 100 feet. In addition to the above, at two legal sales respectively, under the direction of Messrs. JOHN C. BUSHNELL and WARNER L. LIVINGSTON, referees, JAMES M. MILLER will offer at auction the following property: Four lots with the two-story brick stables thereon, located on the south side of Forty-sixth-street, 300 feet west of Sixth-avenue, lots respectively in size each 25 by 100.5, and one lot 25.11 by 46, with the building thereon, situate on the north-west corner of Third-avenue and One Hundred and Third-street. The sale of a house and lot on the north-west corner of Carmine and Bedford streets, under a Supreme Court order in foreclosure, is also noticed for today by JOSEPH MCGUIRE.

To-morrow, (Tuesday,) Dec. 19, MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at an executor's sale by order of the executors of ALEX. W. BRADFORD, deceased, will sell at auction, at the Exchange, the following valuable property, located at North New-York, namely: Four lots on the north-west corner of St. Ann's-avenue and One Hundred and Forty-first-street, two lots on the north side of One Hundred and Forty-first-street, 100 feet west of St. Ann's-avenue, and five lots on the south side of One Hundred and Forty-second-street, 150 feet west of St. Ann's-avenue, each of the lots being in size 25 by 100. At 3 o'clock, several legal sales, respectively under the direction of WALTER L. LIVINGSTON, C. J. JACKSON and RICHARD C. BRANDRETH, Esqs., referees, JAMES M. MILLER also advertises for to-morrow the sale of New-York real estate, as follows: Five-story and basement brick house and lot, No. 39 Stuyvesant-street, north side, between Second and Third avenues; lot in size, 19 by 47.7 by 22.6 by 38; house near covers same. One lot with the building thereon, on the south side of Forty-second-street, 100 feet west of Fourth-street, and 1 lot on the north side of Twenty-third-street, 175 feet east of Second-avenue.

On Friday, Dec. 22, the same auctioneer last named, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, under the direction of D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., Esq., referee, will offer at auction two lots, fronting 50 feet each on the south side of 106th-st., 100 feet west of Third-avenue. Sale adjourned from Friday last. This sale, together with those referred to above, will constitute the business of the week so far as the same has been brought to our notice.

5-20 BONDS

HAVE BEEN CALLED IN BY THE GOVERNMENT, AND ARE NOW BEING PAID.

Many holders of those securities have been converting them, through us, into the

PEORIA & ROCK ISLAND

First Mortgage

7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds, thereby adding 25 PER CENT. TO THEIR CAPITAL, and about 45 PER CENT. to their YEARLY INCOME.

We recommend these bonds strongly, for the following reasons:

The Road, ninety-one miles in length, is already COMPLETED, and earning much more than the interest on the whole issue of bonds.

The mortgage, $1,500,000, is less than $16,500 per mile.

The road passes through a rich, populous, agricultural, manufacturing, and coal district.

It connects Peoria and Rock Island, two of the largest and most flourishing cities in Illinois, and forms part of a trunk-line from Indianapolis to St. Paul—478 miles. It also connects two navigable rivers—the Illinois and Mississippi. The bonds are authorized for the extra equipments and necessary buildings required to do the business now offered.

They are coupon bonds, $1,000 each, and can be registered if desired.

Interest, seven per cent., gold, free of tax, payable February and August.

Price, 90 and interest, in currency.

ERIE ROAD—BEFORE.

On the 6th inst. a meeting of a number of American holders of the stock of the Erie Railway Company was held at Delmonico's, 5th-av. Messrs. W. H. Clerke, Reuben Manley and A. D. Williams were appointed a Committee to confer with such holders of Erie Railway Company stock as are opposed to the present management of the Road. At a subsequent session of the Committee, held on the 12th inst., Mr. John Swann, who represents the English shareholders, was invited to be present and expressed his concurrence in the movement, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That all the American owners of Erie Railway Company's stock, whether holding in their own names or those of other parties, who are opposed to the present management of the Road, and desirous that the affairs of the Company shall be conducted on commercial and not on political principles, are invited to attend a meeting to be held at the address to the Committee, care of Reuben Manley & Co., No. 64 Broadway, New-York, to enable the Committee to communicate with them with the view of carrying out the objects of the meeting.

THE COMMUNIST PARADE.

Procession in Honor of the Men Executed at Paris—A Very Large Number of Spectators—A Quiet Parade.

The procession, yesterday, in honor of the memory of Rossel and other leaders of the Commune, executed in Paris, passed off very quietly. The day was dark and gloomy. The announcement that the procession would start from Cooper Institute about 1 o'clock drew a large number of persons to that vicinity, who commenced to gather there as early as 12½ o'clock. A few gentlemen with red ribbons on the lappels of their coats, and others with rosettes covered with crape, made their appearance shortly before 1 o'clock, and seemed somewhat astonished not to find their comrades in line. At 1 o'clock about twenty Cubans, bearing the Cuban flag, took up a position on Sixth-street, and a few minutes afterward Company A, of Col. LEWIS CLARKE'S colored regiment, marched across the square, and took position on Seventh-street. This company attracted a great deal of attention, and looked and marched well. The next to arrive was a small section of the Garibaldi Guards, with an immense red flag, who marched down to Fifth-street. On this street the trade societies had assembled. At the head of the street, near the Bowery, were a number of sympathizers with the course of the Commune, wearing crape on their left arms and scarlet ribbon in their button-holes. They bore with them a small shield of black wood, on which were the words, "To the memory of the heroes of the Universal Republic." Immediately behind them was the catafalque, consisting of an immense car, drawn by six gray horses, with black plumes and black velvet housings. On the car was a large coffin covered with red cloth and decorated with immortelles, and above it waved the blood-red flags of the Communne. On the sides of the car were inscribed the words: "To the memory of the heroes of the Universal Republic." The car was announced by Sections Nos. 2, 6, 9, 10, 12, 14, 22 and 25 of New-York, Section No. 12 of Newark, No. 20 of Paterson, and a section from Hoboken. Refugees of the Commune residing in New-York, acted as pall-bearers. Behind the car were drawn up a French legion, several German working men's societies and deputations from various trades representing the Labor Reform Association. Among the mottoes borne on the banners were the following: "The spirit of the Commune expands as the axe falls on the necks of the martyrs." "The world is our country; to do good our religion." "And they had all things in common."

Among the ladies in carriages were Mrs. WOODHULL, Miss CLAFLIN, Miss PALMER, Mrs. FRANCIS ROSS MCLENDLEY, Mrs. MARY HUICK, and several other ladies, accompanied by Mr. THEODORE TILTON, made their appearance in Seventh-street, and attracted a good deal of attention. Another party of ladies took their stand beneath the portico of the Cooper Institute, and waited patiently in the cold until the long-delayed procession started. By this time at least ten thousand persons had congregated in the Bowery and along the route of the procession. Broadway and Waverley-place, too, were crowded. The behavior of the multitude was, however, most exemplary. There was no crowding or shoving. A loud cheer was the only thing this nature might be in some measure due to the fact that there were no policemen present to shove and haul spectators about, and make them go where they did not want to. Not a single blue coat was to be seen, and their interference would certainly have been quite superfluous.

At 1:45 the order was given to move, and the procession marched down the Bowery to Great Jones-street in the following order: First came a sort of unprovided advance guard, followed by the band. Then came the colored company, and after them Grand Marshal T. H. BANES, with Assistant Marshals E. Frespon, Constant Chevalier, D. Dewsky, F. McGrear, Dr. Stebbing and D. Chanes. The gentlemen wore red search across their shoulders, and red rosettes with twin rosettes of the same color pinned to the lappels of their coats. They carried as badges of their office, small truncheons adorned with red ribbons. Next to them came members of various sections with sympathizing friends. These marched under the banner of the United States. After them came the Cuban sections, with their national flag and the standard of the lancers of Camaguey. These were followed by the Swiss section under their banner, and by the French and Czech sections. Then came the catafalque, in front of which was the banner of the Universal Republic, surmounted by a garland of immortelles and a small terrestrial globe. On each side of the catafalque were the Communists escaped from Paris, who acted as pall-bearers. These were Simon Deraure, Gaitner, Sr., Major of Artillery of the National Guard of Marseilles; Gaitner, Jr., Gen. Elie May, Gen. Gustave May, Col. Mejdy, Capt. Jolicot, and Lavrand, Prefet of Police in Paris during the short-lived reign of the Commune.

Behind the catafalque was another standard of the Universelle Republique, surmounted with crape bows and a red Phrygian cap. Then came Sections 9 and 12, the latter being the one which proclaims the sexual equality of the sexes. Its banner was borne by Mr. ROMEYN of Astoria. After these came the trades unions, feebly represented, and the remaining sections, with several hundred sympathizers, closed the rear. The procession marched down Great Jones-street into Broadway, thence by Waverley-place into Fifth-avenue. Up this avenue they marched as high as Thirty-fourth-street. They marched down this street to Sixth-avenue, turning again at Fourteenth-street, and re-filing into Union-square. Here the band and the soldiers opened their ranks, forming double lines, through which the Internationals filed around the north ends of the Lincoln statue, each man taking off his hat.

The Fourth-Avenue Railroad Crossings—Citizens' Indignation Meeting.

The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting of property-owners and citizens on Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh streets, Lexington avenue and vicinity, Saturday evening:

Whereas, The Railroad Company, without authority or cover of law, have taken possession of Forty-sixth and other streets, from Fourth to Madison-avenue, and have erected thereon a high fence, entirely to the exclusion, detriment and peril of the public; and that in order to more completely prevent travel of all kinds through these several streets, they have caused, or threaten to cause, a deep cut on Fourth-avenue, across Forty-sixth and other streets, and have also stretched chains across Forty-sixth-street at Fourth-avenue, and between Fourth and Madison-avenues, without any person to attend them; and that they have placed, or caused to be placed, other obstructions, which, together with the before-mentioned, are continued day and night, to prevent travel and transportation from the east to west side of the City, and have thereby rendered the crossings of Fourth-avenue and all pavements between, the streets, thereby rendering transit across the avenue impossible; and

Whereas, The laws, acts and parts of acts relating to said railroad do not privilege, grant, permit or authorize the Railroad Company to place more than four tracks, commencing at Forty-fifth-street and running south on Fourth-avenue; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the right and the duty of citizens to demand the opening of Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth and other obstructed streets between Fourth and Madison avenues.

Resolved, That we demand that cars shall be kept across the crossings, and that the intervening spaces between the tracks be paved with wood or stone, to bring the street and track on a level suitable for travel of horses and vehicles; and that other crossings, for which property-owners on the intersecting streets or the line of the road have paid assessment, be refixed.

Resolved, That if the streets are not opened, and all obstructions in the way of travel removed, on or before ——, that it will then become the duty of citizens to decide what action will be necessary to accomplish the purpose.

Resolved, That the chains now stretched across the streets above mentioned to prevent vehicles crossing, be removed, or proper persons stationed to take charge of them, and give prompt passage to vehicles of all kinds.

Resolved, That the resolutions submitted by the Board of Aldermen on the 14th December inst., in the opinion of this meeting, are in the entire interest of the railroad companies; that said resolutions ignore almost wholly the owners of property and the rights of citizens generally.

Resolved, That, as the people, will not submit to the construction of the road as proposed in those resolutions, particularly that part between Forty-fifth-street and ——street, and hereby enter our earnest and solemn protest against the City authorities granting such niche and privileges to the Railroad Company.

Resolved, That nothing more objectionable than a sunk cut track will be acceptable to the people; that it be sunk low enough for avoiding the grades commencing at Forty-second-street and running north.

Resolved, That it is an outrage on the business community and on the owners and drivers of horses, and a detriment, discomfort, inconvenience and injury to the transaction of business, to close Forty-sixth-street and other mentioned streets, and to compel drivers of vehicles to take circuitous routes to find some crossing for them from east to west.

Resolved, That as the alteration of the road is intended for a permanency, and not for the time being only, or for a few years, it is of the highest importance that it be done in a proper manner, even if it does involve considerable increase of cost; and that it be divested of all objectionable features, so far as possible to the extent engineering ability will admit; and that this be done in the interest of the people, having due respect for the rights and property of the Railroad, and the advantage resulting from it to the City.

Resolved, That if this cannot be done with the depot and locomotive and car houses as at present constructed, then it is the duty and the obligation of the Railroad Company to reconstruct these. That this cannot in any way be considered an obstacle in the way of proper and needful alterations, as the buildings were constructed with a knowledge of the requirements of the people, and in opposition and in defiance of their expressed wishes. And if provision was not made to meet these requirements when resistance was no longer tenable, then it was simply an arbitrary act, or a great engineering blunder, and therefore the Railroad Company, and not the public, are responsible and at fault.

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE.
Knowing from experience that proofs of successful treatment are the most decisive credentials to public confidence which a physician can produce, Dr. LIGHTHILL is pleased to present a few specimens from the many certificates of cures which he received in the course of his practice. Thousands of testimonials, of similar character, and emanating from the most reliable sources, will be cheerfully submitted on application.

CURE OF DEAFNESS.
FROM MR. MORRIS PHILLIPS,
Editor and Proprietor of the HEBREW JOURNAL,
OFFICE OF THE HEBREW JOURNAL,
No. 3 Park-place, New-York.
I testify with pleasure to the success which attended Dr. LIGHTHILL'S treatment in the case of my brother, who had been affected with deafness and noises in the head. The results of Dr. LIGHTHILL'S applications were as prompt as they were effective. The hearing was restored, the noises removed, and the cure was as radical as it has since proved permanent. MORRIS PHILLIPS.

CURE OF CATARRH.
FROM REV. S. J. CORNEILLE,
Rector of All Saints Church,
No. 20 GOUVERNEUR-ST., New-York.
DR. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: It is with great pleasure I tender you this acknowledgment of my appreciation of the benefit I have derived from your treatment. I present it that others who may be suffering from like causes as myself, may, through the publication of my experience, learn that under your care relief can be obtained.
I have been afflicted with Catarrh for many years, which at one time threatened the loss of my voice, and undermined my general health to such an extent as to necessitate a suspension of my pastoral duties. Two months of your medical treatment, however, effected me such invaluable relief that I was enabled to resume my duties and perform them without the slightest inconvenience.
Having the highest appreciation of your medical skill, and with many thanks for unfeigned kindness and courtesy,
I am, dear Sir, yours very gratefully,
S. J. CORNEILLE, Rector All Saints Church.
Dr. LIGHTHILL may be consulted on Deafness, Catarrh, Affections of the Throat and Lungs, and all chronic, obstinate or complicated diseases, requiring either medical or surgical aid, from 9 A. M. until 3 P. M., at his residence,
No. 106 WEST THIRTY-FOURTH-ST.

STODART PIANO-FORTES.
BY THE INTRODUCTION OF A NEW SCALE OF FULL 7¼ OCTAVES, THEY HAVE SUCCEEDED IN PRODUCING AN INSTRUMENT WHICH, FOR SUSTAINING SONORITY AND PURITY OF TONE, STANDS ALONE IN SOMETHING BETWEEN AN ORDINARY PIANO AND THE DIAPASON OF A CHURCH ORGAN.
RICHARD GRANT WHITE.
In the New-York Tribune, Oct. 31, 1871.
I CONSIDER STODART'S SQUARE PIANOS TO BE AMONG THE VERY BEST I EVER HEARD. I. M. GOTTSCHALK.
ALLOW ME TO THANK YOU FOR THE KINDNESS EXTENDED BY YOU IN SHOWING US THOSE TRULY MAGNIFICENT PIANOS. HARRY SANDERSON.
MY OPINION OF THE "STODART" PIANO, BOTH GRAND AND SQUARE, TONE—PURE AND BRILLIANT, AND FOR EQUALNESS CANNOT BE EXCELLED. TOUCH—FREE AND RESPONSIVE IN EVERY PARTICULAR. GEO. W. MORGAN.
AMONG THE MANY MAGNIFICENT INSTRUMENTS MADE IN THIS COUNTRY, THE STODART PIANO WILL BE FOUND THE BEST AND CHEAPEST.
